Foreword

The inscriptions engraved on stone or metal are primary sources for the reconstruction of the history of our past. To collect these inscriptions individual scholars as well as government institutions have been working on the collection, decipherment, and publication of these records. In this regard Dr. MCR HRD IT's Centre for Telangana Studies, took the initiative to collect and compile all published inscriptions belonging to Telangana State and placed them in chronological order.

This is a work of a total of four volumes. Volume-I - Pre-Kakatiya Telangana - includes the inscriptions from first century AD to those of the Western Chalukyas of Kalyana – overlords of Telangana. Volume-II - Imperial Kakatiyas - includes inscriptions from early Kakatiyas to first imperial ruler Kakatiya Ganapatideva. Volume-III - Decline of Kakatiyas - includes the inscriptions of Rudramadevi and Prataparudra-II. Volume-IV- Post-Kakatiya Telangana - includes inscriptions of rulers that succeeded the Kakatiyas.

I hope these volumes will help and fulfil the needs of the scholars and historians engaged in the historical research of Telangana State. I am sure that all scholars and students interested in Indian history will welcome this publication.

Preface

The problem with the history of Telangana (as it is to an extent with that of India generally) is that the earlier the period under review the scarcer are the basic documents and sources. This has to do with the destruction of records in the turbulent periods due to invasion and conquest. Successive rulers may not have had the same interest or allocated funds to preserve the sources of history of their predecessors in power. It is largely under British rule in India that the indigenous sources – Hindu, Jain, Buddhist and Muslim – were systematically sought out and published. The British interest stemmed from their desire to learn about the country and people that they happened to rule.

In the case of Telangana, official sources of its history emerge with Mughal invasion and conquest. For the earlier periods, we have to rely on accounts by travellers and oral stories of the rulers and conditions in the land. Considerable evidence is also available from the epigraphs – both in stone and copper – that were spread across the region

However, the availability of epigraphical evidence is scattered in various publications of the central and state agencies. The purpose of this set of volumes is to bring together all the published sources of epigraphs concerning Telangana so as to enable scholars to access them easily.

The effort has been painstaking and has taken two years by a dedicated scholar, Ms. Vasanta Lakshmi, who has devoted her time to this task. Such an effort can come only with internal drive and passion for the task. Ms. Vasanta Lakshmi has been solely responsible for this output. My role, as General Editor, has been peripheral and advisory and I have enjoyed seeing the work emerge and the questions of method being raised and solved.

The Centre for Telangana Studies of the MCR HRD Institute of Telangana is pleased to have supported this effort and ensured the publication of all four volumes of Epigraphica Telanganica. Successive Directors-General – Mr B.P Acharya IAS, Mr Harpreet Singh IAS, and the present ADG, Mr Benhur Mahesh Dutt Ekka IAS, present Director General Dr Shashank Goel IAS have made it possible by their support and goodwill.

Acknowledgments

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Government of Telangana. This project Epigraphia Telanganica was initiated and seen through by the Centre for Telangana Studies, Dr. MCRHRD Institute of Telangana.

It is my duty to express my profound gratitude to Dr. Gautam Pingle, Head of Centre for Telangana Studies and Dean of Studies, for initiating the project and for guidance throughout. Most importantly, has been the continued support of successive Director Generals of Dr. MCR HRD IT, Sri B.P. Acharya, IAS, Sri Harpreet Singh, IAS, present ADG Sri Benhur Mahesh Dutt Ekka, IAS and Present Director General Dr. Shashank Goel, IAS. Without their continued support this work would not have been completed.

My gratitude to the libraries who provided access to the library and helped me to collect the necessary data. In this Department of Heritage Telangana Library-Hyderabad, G.P. Birla Library-Hyderabad, C.P. Brown Research Centre for Languages-Kadapa, Deccan College Post-Graduate and Research Library-Pune, Dr MCR HRD IT library and its Librarian Srinivas Bashetty and Junior Assistant G. Neelappa.

My sincere gratitude to Dr. K. Muniratnam Reddy, Director (Epigraphy), Archaeological Survey of India (ASI), who allowed me to use some unpublished inscriptions from his collection in Epigraphia Telanganica.

My gratitude is due to Dr. Aruna Borra (Telugu scholar), Dr. Madhusoodana Pai (Sanskrit scholar) who helped with the translations of two inscriptions. Also my thanks to Divya Archana for her support.

Above all I am grateful to my parents G. Chinna Kumara Swami Reddy and Sai Lakshmi, and my brothers Arjun, Ganesh, Siva and my husband M. Sudarshan Reddy.

General Introduction

The purpose of this work Epigraphia Telanganica is to compile all the inscriptions in a chronological order from various published and unpublished sources related to Telangana. These inscriptions constitute valuable historical evidence for the history of Telangana. It is intended to help scholars working on the history of Telangana.

The leading work on Kakatiya history has been that of Cynthia Talbot's "Pre-colonial India in Practice: Society, Religion, and Identity in Medieval Andhra". She has accessed almost all of the published inscriptions and formed the basis of her scholarship on Telangana in the Kakatiya period. This has led to the idea of compiling all these inscriptions chronologically so as to enable future scholars who may not have the resources, time and effort to do the same.

Most of the inscriptions are in the languages and scripts of Brahmi, Prakrit, Nagari, Sanskrit, Siddhamatrika, Nandinagari, Kannada, Telugu, Hindi and Tamil. However only English translations of these inscriptions are compiled in this work. In the case of two inscriptions where translations were not available, we have taken help from Dr. Aruna and Dr. Madhusoodan. Some unpublished inscriptions are taken from the collection of Dr. Muniratnam Reddy. Nine inscriptions were translated by the editor of these volumes, G. Vasanta Lakshmi.

A total of 2396 inscriptions were compiled from various sources like Epigraphia Indica, South Indian inscriptions, Archaeological Survey of India: Annual Reports on Indian Epigraphy, Epigraphia Andrica, Andhra Pradesh Government Archaeology Series No. 3, Kannada Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh, Indian Antiquary Reports, Andhra Pradesh Archaeology A Review, Annual Reports by State Archaeology Department, Copper plate inscriptions of the state museum Hyderabad, Corpus of inscriptions in the Telangana Districts of H.E.H. The Nizam's Dominions, Dynastic list of Copper plate inscriptions, Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh Cuddapah District, Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh Kurnool District, Inscriptions of Warangal District, Inscriptions of Karimnagar District, Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh Nalgonda District, Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh Mahabubnagar District, Stone Sculptures in the Alampur Museum, Inscriptions of Telangana Nizamabad District, Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh Medak District, Andhra Pradesh Archaeological Series No.9., Selected stone inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh, A Catalogue of inscriptions upto 1964, Select Epigraphs of Andhra Pradesh, Memories of Archaeological Survey of India. No-6: The Temples of Palampet and Corpus inscriptions of Telangana districts, etc. In this collection 1916 are the main inscriptions and 480 are the variants of some of them. These variants are indicated with 'Also'.

This work is divided into four volumes. The Kakatiya dynasty had its foundation and was based in present-day Telangana. However, as it expanded its rule the Kakatiya dynasty inscriptions were located in districts of Nellore, Kadapa, Krishna, East and West Godavari, Kanchi, Gaya, Tumkur and Kurnool. These are also included in second and third volumes.

Volume-I - "Pre-Kakatiya Telangana" - consisting of 829 inscriptions (695 inscriptions and 134 variants), deals with the pre-Kakatiya period. This volume contains inscriptions related to the periods when Telangana was ruled by the dynasties of Ikshvaku, Vishnu Kandin, Western Chalukyas of Badami, Eastern Chalukyas of Vengi, Pallava, Rashtrakuta, Chalukyas of Vemulawada, Western Chalukyas of Kalyana, Kalachuri, Haihaya, Madugonda Chalukya, Eastern Ganga, and Kanduri Chodas. Large number of inscriptions are related to Western Chalukyas of Kalyani.

The earliest Telugu inscription is by Vikramaditya-I of the Western Chalukya of Badami kingdom, found in Amudalapadu, Alampur Taluk, present day Jogulamba Gadwal district back to 30th April, A.D. 660. This has the merit of recording the earliest use of Telugu alphabets in Telangana. The inscription's script uses old Telugu-Kannada alphabets and the language is Sanskrit.

Only one Pallava copper-plate inscription is included in this volume which is at the State Museum whose find-spot is unknown. Kanduri Choda inscriptions are also included. Kanduri Chodas were contemporaries of Kakatiyas, but relatively less known. Their inscriptions were found in the districts of Mahabubnagar and Nalgonda.

Volume-II - "Imperial Kakatiyas" - comprises 589 inscriptions (425 inscriptions and 164 variants) starting from early Kakatiya chiefs to Kakatiya sovereign Ganapatideva. Initially Kakatiyas were the feudatories of Western Chalukyas of Kalyana and ruled Telangana as their subordinates. Notable Kakatiya chiefs were Gundyana, Beta-I, Prola-I, Beta-II/Betrarasa and Prolarasa/Prola-II. Kakatiya sovereignty begins with Rudra/Prataparudra-I and continues to Mahadeva, Ganapatideva, Rudradeva Maharaja/Rudramadevi and Prataparudra. After becoming independent rulers, Kakatiyas adopted the titles of Western Chalukyas, using terms/titles like Mahamandaleswara, Pattodathi, Sri Pada Padmopajivi etc in their inscriptions.

This volume deals with the inscriptions of Kakatiyas up to and including the reign of Ganapatideva. Majority of inscriptions in this volume belong to the period of Ganapatideva's rule. He was the greatest ruler of this dynasty who ruled for over 60 years. Under his rule the Kakatiya domains achieved imperial status. These inscriptions are made on behalf of himself and his subordinates. These inscriptions mainly record the expansion of his territory, his marriage to Ayya Princesses and land donations to the various temples.

The Bahal inscription of the Devagiri Yadava King Singhana has been added in this volume as it mentions the capture of Prince Ganapatideva in the war between Kakatiya Rudra and Yadava Jayatugi. Ganapatideva was made king of 'Trikinga' after his release. But how much time he was in the captivity of Yadavas is not known. During the period of Ganapatideva's captivity Racherla Rudri Reddy suppressed the rebellions in Kakatiya territory and successfully negotiated the release of Ganapatideva from the captivity. This is one of the most prominent events in the history of Kakatiyas. After his release, the friendly relation between Kakatiya and Yadava kingdoms continued till his reign.

Inscriptions of Kakatiya Nayakas like Racherla, Viriyala, Malyala, Natavadi, Cheraku, Kota and Kayastha were also added in this volume. In this Chebrolu Inscription of Jaya mentions about the expedition of Divi or Island (Diviseema) by Ganapatideva, his marriage to Ayya princesses Naramba and Peramba, entry of the Ayya Prince Jaya in his service as a Gajasenapati (chief of elephant troops) and Ganapatideva's grant to Jaya of the city of Shanmukha (Chebrolu). This inscription gives the earliest authenticated date of Ganapatideva's reign.

Another notable inscription from this volume is the Bayyaram tank inscription of Ganapatideva's sister Mailambika. This inscription gives the genealogy of Kakatiya's and her marriage to Natavadi Rudra.

The inscription of Ganapambika/Ganapamba (Ganapatideva's daughter) reveals the marriage relations with the Kota family. Yenamandala inscription and Mogalutla Grant of Ganapamba records the marriage of Ganapamba to Kota chief, Beta, and his death, because of disease, her rule in the Amaravati region. Inscriptions indicate that after the death of her husband Ganapamba ruled his share of the territory with the help of her father. Not only royal women, women employees of the king also donated cows for the perpetual lamps in various temples. Yeitasani who called herself Sri Pada Padmopajivi (subordinate) of Ganapatideva in her Vadapuru inscription mentioned the donation of cows to the temple of Ramesvara in the merit of Ganapatideva. From this, one notices that many aristocratic women occupied prominent positions in his rule; they were allowed to rule, construct and donate lands, cows to temples in the name of their loved ones and their sovereign.

Last inscription of Ganapatideva along with Rudradeva maharaja is in A.D. 1267 from Upputuru. According to this inscription Ganapatideva was still alive during this inscription period. During Ganapatideva's rule the Kakatiya kingdom reached its imperial zenith. His subordinates were loyal and there are marital alliances involving tributaries and ruling family.

Volume-III - "Decline of Kakatiyas" - records the inscriptions of Rudradeva Maharaja/ Rudramadevi and Prataparuda (the last ruler of this dynasty). In this volume a total 518 inscriptions are compiled (402 inscriptions and 116 variants). This volume starts with the rule of Rudradeva Maharaja and continues till the Visala grant of Prola-Nayaka in A.D.1325. It mentions the Muslim invasion of Kakatiya dynasty and capture of Prataparudra. But the last inscription about Prataparudra is from Santamaguluru, Narasaraopeta Taluk, Guntur District and is dated 3rd April, A.D. 1326.

After Ganapatideva's death, the majority of the inscriptions were in the name of Rudradeva Maharaja. Only a few inscriptions mentioned the name of Rudrama/ Rudramahadevi/ Rudramadevi, they might be the same or different persons. During this period, we can notice Yadava inscriptions from Rahamantapur, Nalgonda district. These are individual inscriptions of Yadava chieftains. With this we can assume that during Rudradeva Maharaja's rule he maintained friendly relations with Yadavas and some of the Kakatiya territory was under their rule. Bidar inscription of Rudramadevi is also included in this volume.

Prataparudra is mentioned in the inscriptions starting from A.D. 1289. In these inscriptions he is referred to as Kumara Rudra and, after becoming king, he was known as Prataparudradeva Maharaja. An interesting inscription from Tumkur from Karnataka mentioned Prataparudra's father as Mahadeva; the original inscription is not found; only a copy has been taken into the record. Other than this inscription there was no mention about the father of Prataparudra. This Tumkur inscription is also added in this volume because of its historical importance.

Two 19th century inscriptions of Dantewara ruler Dilkpaladeva are included in this volume as he proclaimed himself as the successor of Kakatiyas of Warangal.

Volume-IV - "Post-Kakatiya Telangana" - contains 460 inscriptions (394 inscriptions 66 variants) of post-Kakatiya rulers of Telangana and some indeterminate inscriptions. It contains inscriptions in the name of family members of feudal chiefs, military and civil officers such as Musunuri chiefs, Racherla Velamas and Kondaveedu Reddi's.

Along with these, inscriptions relating to the sovereigns of Vijayanagara located or related to Telangana are included in this volume.

Inscriptions of non-Telugu rulers of Telangana such as Tughlaq, Bahmani, Gajapatis of Orissa, Qutb Shahi, Adil Shahi, Mughal and Nizam/Asaf Jahi were also included.

In this volume one Sikh inscription is added, it belongs to Maharaja Ranjit Singh, on a gun near the administrative office in Golconda fort. Chandu Lal Malhotra who is also known as Maharaja Chandu Lal from Khatri family background worked as a prime minister of third Nizam of Hyderabad Sikandhar Jah, and he worked in the court of Maharaja Ranjit Singh. With the recommendation of Chandu Lal, Sikandhar Jah started Sikh regiment; Maharaja Ranjit Singh sent some of his men to join Sikh regiment. This gun also came to Hyderabad with them and was placed in Golconda.

Along with inscriptions, plates of some of the inscriptions were also added at the end of these volumes. These plates were collected from the districts of Warangal, Karimnagar, Medak, Mahabubnagar and Nizamabad, courtesy of the Department of Heritage, Telangana.

With the best of my efforts over two and half years, I accessed more than 2000 inscriptions and compiled them chronologically and dynastically. New discoveries of inscriptions in the future need to be added when available. I hope these volumes will help the scholars to work on the history of Telangana.

The Deval Masjid, as its name signifies, was originally a Hindu temple, and converted in to a mosque by Muhammad Tughlaq at the time of his deccan conquest. The plan of the building is star-shaped ; it has undergone little alteration at the hands of the moslems expecting the removal of the semi-circular chamber and the setting up a pulpit. The original arrangement of the pillars remains undisturbed and the figures of tirthankaras may be noticed on some of them to this day. The building has a high plinth and also a vast court around it enclosed by a wall of massive masonry.

The inscriptions are curved on several pieces of the stone which, at present, are lying in the interior of the building. Both of them are incomplete, the tablets bearing them evidently broke when the buildings, on which they were originally set up, collapsed. The existing pieces of one tablet measure collectively 7'8" X 1'13", those of the other 8' X '1'3". The style of writing is Naskh, of a bold, vigorous type resembling closely the contemporary script of Delhi inscriptions. The phraseology of the epigraph also conforms to the surmise of their being designed by the court writer.

Translation

[L1. 1-5.] Hail ! Kapaya-nayaka, (who is) ornamented by all good qualities, the lord of the Amdhra country, the brother of others women, the lord of the excellent city of Anumanamgallu, the master (who) established the Coda king, the protector of the security of Kamchi, the Pamcala (prince of Panchals ?) in dangerous assaults, Iruvettara-ganda, Gan(d)da-gopala, the ruler (jagadala) of three kings, and (one) who is endowed with such and other titles.

[L1. 5-13.] His pet servant Era-Potu-lemka, was ruling in Pillalamarri; and since god Erakesvara was damaged by the Sultan Alavadin, during the national disturbances of that time and place, Era-Potu-lemka, for merit to his ruler Kapaya-nayuaka, to his own father Anumakonda-Macinayaka, and to his mother Rudra-Sani, performed the re-establishment (of that deity) in the Saka year 1279 (that is) the present (cyclic) year Hemalambi, in the month of Jyestha, on the thirteenth day of the bright fortnight, on Thursday, [L1. 13-14.] and gave away, for an adhika-padi for the tiffin (i.e. light meal) of the lord, once (in the day), half a dry field as vritti, behind the Devara-kumta of Pillalamari.

Contents and Remarks

This inscription is by Kapaya-nayaka, records the re-establishment of God Erakesvara and the granting of half a dry field to him behind Devara-kunta of Pillalamarri by Era-potu-lemka, ruler of Pillalamarri and servant of Kapaya nayaka; reference had been made to the damage sustained by this temple during the national disturbances, probably some damage done by Sultan Alau-d-din. Some of the titles of Kapaya-nayaka are interesting, as for example, 'the Lord of the Amdhra country', 'the protector of the security of Kamci', 'Ganda-gopala', 'Muru-raya-jagadala' and 'Iruvettara-ganda'.

The names of the parents of Era-potu-lemka are given as Anumakomda-Maci-nayaka and Rudra-sani.

This inscription is on the wall near the entrance of the fort. The inscription, after invocation to the god Bhairava, introduces the chief Anavotanayaka, son of Singamanayaka, son of Eradachinayaka of the Recherla family, with titles Mahamandalesvara, Andhradesadhisvara, Gajadala-vibhala, Rayagaya gopala, Pancha-Pandyadala vibhala Pratiganda Bhairava, Bhujabala-Bhima, Khadga-Narayana, Kaketa-rajya-sthapanacharya and Ashtadikuraya-manobhayamkara and Somakula - Parasurama. The chief is said to be residing in Rajagiri and ruling all the earth. It is also stated that he conducted the defence works of the fort and constructed wells on Rajukonda to the south of Anavota-samudra and on Naganayamkonda to the north of the same tank, and a mud fort to the west of the same. The tank Anavota - samudra was caused to be dug between the two hills, for the benefit of all beings and named after his title Pratigandabhairava. His Karanam Chilamaraju Tippana wrote it.

This inscription is in the Milaradeva temple. The inscription which is in Sanskrit verse and Telugu prose describes the genealogy of the Velama chiefs of Recherla family and records the village of Ayyanavolu on Guruvara, Sravana su. 15, Saumya, S. 1291 (=Thursday, 19th July, A.D. 1369) to the god Mailaradeva for the anga and runga-bhogas and other forms of worship by Anapora Nayaka son Singama Nayaka. It is stated that the gift was made by the king who was ruling over Orugallu, Tribhuvanagiri, Rajukonda, Singavaram and other Telugu countries, on the occasion of visit to the temple of the god during the course of his digvijaya (conquest of the quarters). In the genealogical account it is stated that the Recherla family to which the king belonged was honoured by the Kakatiya kings. Vennaya, the progenitor, had a son called Dachaya. The latter in accordance with the command of Prataparudra conquered the Pandyas, thereby acquiring the title of Pandya-rayagaja-kesari (lion the elephant king). Dachaya's son was Singa; and he in turn had two sons, Anapotanayaka and Madhavanayaka, who are said to have ruled the kingdom jointly.

The inscription was composed by the poet Naganatha, son of Pasupati Pandita the Kausika-Brahmarshi gōtra. The Sanskrit portion in 27 verses is named as Nakshatramala.

This inscription is on a stone in front of Jagannatha Swami temple. States that Venna Mahipala, son of Madhava of the Recherla family, built in the town of Skandadri (Kandikonda) a temple for the god Janardana and installed the deity in it on Guruvara, Su. 5 of Sravana in the year Rakshasa S.1297 (A.D.1375, August. 2 Sunday) and granted land for carrying on worship therein. The inscription describes the lineage of Venna and gives a number of details about his ancestors. It is stated that the Recherla family was the purest of the Sudra caste which sprang up from the feet of Brahma born of the lotus navel of Narayana, the lord of the Universe. Dacha of this family defeated the Pandyas in battle and put down their pride. He married Pochambika and had by her a son named Singabhupala; and Singa married Singamba and had two sons Annavota and Madhava. The latter's son Venna went by the command of his father from Devapuri (Devarakonda) to Skandadri and established himself there.

Jatararevu Inscription of Madanayaka I

by

S. Dasarathi M.A., Hyderabad

The subjoined inscription is engraved on a stone slab set up to the left of the steep flight of steps constructed near the ferry across the river Krishna on the northern bank near Srisailam, near Jatararevu in the Amarabad forests, Achampet taluk, Mahboobnagar district. Jatararevu, as the name itself would suggest, was the place of congregation, where all the pilgrims to Srisailam from the north crossed the river before reaching the shrine. The place is situated at a distance of three miles from Hyderabad-Srisailam Road, ten miles from Srisailam temple proper.

The inscription is in 14 lines. The condition of writing is fairly good except at three or four places (II. 6,7,8 and 9), where it suffered damage. The lines, however, are not straight and even, and the size of the characters uniform. The script is Telugu and belongs to the early phase of what Burnell calls "the old Telugu Script". Some letters have assumed modern form, particularly sha with its down stroke obliquely placed to the right side of the letter and na in which the curve at the beginning has obtained loop. The script more or less resembles that of the later Kakatiya and early Reddi inscriptions of the 14th century A.D. The language is Telugu (prose), which betrays the influence of Kannada and Maharashtra languages (ex:- Oluvara, olladavara, kachapana; nayamkachaputu etc.).

As regards orthography, the following points may be noticed,

(i) The indication of aspiration of letters by means of a down stroke has not yet formed, for example, in sattayudhishthira (1.1) bamdhujanādhara (1.11), dhanamjaya (1.4), mannedalavibhala (1. 17), pada padamaradhaka;

(ii) there is unnecessary employment of anusvara as, for example, in chemkolu for chekōlu (13.) lokanamtha for lokanatha (1.9) and in pumnyamu for punyamu (1.12);

(iii) sometimes the anusvara is used in places where the immediately following nasal has to be doubled, for example in munmadi for mummadi (1.2); omna for onna (1.6) mamne for manne (1.7) nayinkimni for nayink nni (1.11) and sanam-makunnu for sanam-makunnu (1.12);

(iv) care has not been bestowed to show the destination between the letters che and be; for instance, in chemkolugamda and Betaraju,

(v) the distinction between long and short vowels by means of superscripts is not shown in certain instances such as Gamge for Gamgeya (1.1), gota for gōta (1.3) gotra for gotra (1.4) etc.

(vi) it may be noted that in some titles the tadbhava forms are used, for example, satte for satya (1.1), vidde for vidya (1.4);

(vii) the repha is preceded by a conjunct consonant; for example, in Gamgaparvvata (1.12) achamdrarkka (1.13) etc.

These and other mistakes in the inscription may be due to the carelessness of the scribe. In the transliteration into Roman script repha comes before the conjunct consonant rvvata, drárkka.

The object of the inscription is to record the construction of a flight of steps down to the bank of the Krishna by Madanayaka of the Recherla family, so that merit may accrue to himself and his parents. Singamanayaka and Singasanamma.

The inscription starts as usual with the prasasti of the family, enumerates the achievements of the early chiefs who preceded the king, registers the pious act of public utility viz., the construction of the steps by him ends with the usual mangalavakya.

The prasasti contains several titles of the family, borne by the king or his ancestors in commemoration perhaps of specific acts of valour or greatness and these can be grouped under three heads: (i) titles that have a bearing on the laudable qualities of the donor and his ancestors; (ii) titles that exhibit the military prowess of the king and his ancestors and the (iii) titles which contain references to historical incidents. The last one complements the second variety. The titles of the first variety are:

- (1) samastagunaganalamkara (He who is adorned with all good qualities);
- (2) satteyudhishthira (Yudhishthira of truthfulness);
- (3) Sauchagāngeya (Bhishma in the purity of mind);
- (4) bamdhujaandhara (the main supporter of all relatives)
- (5) parānganadura (keeps himself at a distance from others wives.)
- (6) Duriyakula-kumudachandra (moon to the water lily i.e, the family of Durjaya); this does not describe any laudable quality; but specifies the name of the family to which the king belonged.
- (7) Satyaharischandra (Harischandra in observing truth);
- (8) gotraparthiva (king in his family);
- (9) oluvaranamta (lover of his friends);
- (10) trairajaguniyya (who excels the three kings in good qualities).

The titles of the second variety viz.,

- (1) baṅgaliraya-rakshapalaka (protector of Baṅgaliraya); this is probably a mistake for samgadirayarakshapalaka protector of the friendly kings).
- (2) gadigotamalla (wrestler of the frontier forts);
- (3) viluvidde Parasurama (Parasurama in the art of archery);
- (4) karmuka Dhanamjaya (who equals Arjuna in wielding the bow);
- (5) pratāpa-martāmda (who shines like the Sun in valour);
- (6) olladavara-gamda (an invincible enemy to those who are unfriendly);
- (7) gayagovala (protector of cows, i.e., kings
- (8) iruvettugamda - a mistake for iruvattu-gamda, (vanquisher of the twenty)
- (9) Gamdagopala (who is a herdsman of heroes);
- (10) mururayajagad(d)ala (a conqueror of the territory of the three kings);
- (11) huddamtakara (valorous hero) signify the valour of the donor in general,

while the third variety,

- (1) mummadiballaragamda (he who defeated a hero by name Mummadi);
- (2) Asagantila-chemkolugamda (the hero had taken the head of Asaga);
- (3) Ura Betaraju-sirahkhamdana (he who had taken the head of Asaga
- (4) Kamchi-kavata Churakara (the plunderer of the gateways of Kamchi);
- (5) omnanikku kudiriyaddu mandalika ragomda (he who defeated mandalikas of Omnanikku (Honnagatt) and Kudiriyaddu (Kudiregattu);
- (6) vairi-manne-dalavibhāla (he who destroyed the forces of the hostile manne chiefs);
- (7) Pamcha-Pandidalavibhala (he who destroyed the forces of five Pandya kings);
- (8) gajadalavibhala (destroyer of the elephant forces);
- (9) Somakula-Parusarama (who is Parasurama to the members of the lunar race).

Among the titles of the first variety, Durjayakula-kumuda-chandra denoting Durjaya as the progenitor of the Velama family occurs here for the first time in the Velama inscriptions. Several other mediaeval ruling families in Andhra such as the chiefs of Kota, Chagi, Velanati, Haihaya, Kondapadumati and Kakatiya also trace their descent from Durjaya. The identity of Durjaya is not known, though the inscriptions of the Velamas and the chiefs of the aforementioned dynasties state unequivocally that they belong to the fourth caste. In the Tandivada plates, a certain Rana-Durjaya is mentioned as the ancestor of Pri -thimaharaja, who was ruling over parts of coastal Andhra in the 7th century A.D. He could not have been the progenitor of the families mentioned above.

The three kings referred to in the titles trairaja-guniyya and Mururayajagadala are not susceptible of identification at present.

The title Bamgaliraya rakshapalaka seems to be an error for Samga-diraya-rakshapaluka (protector of kings who are friendly), a title which occurs Velugativarivamsavali, the family chronicle of the Velama chiefs.

In Mummadi Ballaragamda we probably have a reference to the defeat of Panta chief by name Mummadi at the hands of the Velama brothers Anapota and Mada, in the battle of Moluguru in Chenjarla region.

The chiefs Asaga and Ura-Betaraju referred to respectively in the titles Asaganitala-chemkolugamda and Ura-Betaraju sirahkhamdana, are not known to us from any contemporary records. However, these two chiefs are known to history: but they belong to a period much anterior to Madanayaka, the issuer of this inscription. It is likely that these titles are hereditary and may have been inherited by Madanayaka from his ancestors who must have killed the afore-mentioned Asaga and Ura-Betaraju.

The titles Kamchi-kavara-chura-kara, Pamcha-Pandi-dala-vibhala and gajadala-vibhala were obtained by the Velama chiefs during the campaign of Kakati Prataparudra in 1316 A. D. against the Pandyas. Era Dachanayaka, the grandfather of Madanayaka I, is said to have led the Velama contingent of the Kakatiya army, when Muppidinayaka's son Pedda Rudra, attacked Kamchi, broke open its gateways and occupied it. The five Pandyas gathered their forces and gave battle to the Kakatiya army with great determination. In a hotly contested battle, the Pandyan elephant corps charged the Telugu infantry and caused panic, but Erra Dacha not only averted this disaster but also arrested the onward march of the leader of the Pandya elephant corps, which won the appreciation of the famous warriors of Prataparudras conferred on the Velama leader, these above titles.

The title Omnanikku kudiriyaddu mandalikaragamda seems to be a wrong form or variant of Honnagattu Kudiregattu mandalikaragamda. The places Honnagattu and Kudiregattu are in Mysore region. It is not known how this title was earned by the Velama chieftains.

The title Somakula-Parasurama was earned by Anapota and Madanayaka, the two Velama brothers, when they killed a number of Kshatriyas in the battle of Jallipalli. The Velugoṭivarivamsavali gives a long list of names of the Kshatriyas of the lunar family, killed by the said two Velama chieftains.

Madanayaka I, who had issued the inscription under study, was the son of Singamanayaka I and younger brother of Anapota I. He may be considered as the real founder of the Devarakonda branch of the Velamas. He was a great warrior and assisted his elder brother in extending the Velama dominions, at the expense of Reddi and Kamma chiefs, a long list of whom is given in the Velugotivārivamsāvali. In a battle fought near Molugur in Chejarla region, Anapota and Madanayaka defeated the Panta chiefs, Mailaru and Mummadi are said to have been lords of the city of Ramagiri and masters of two hundred forts.

The treacherous assassination of Simgamanayaka I by the Kshatriyas while he was conducting operations against the Jallipalli fort roused the fury of his two sons, Anapota I and Mada I, who with redoubled efforts marched with their forces to capture the Jallipalli fort and to take vengeance upon the Kshatriyas for their misconduct. While the Velama chiefs were busy besieging the fort, several Kshatriyas in the neighbourhood joined together and marched with a large army in the direction of Jallipalli to help the besieged. On hearing their advance, Anapota and Mada left Jallipalli and marched against them with a veteran Velama contingent. In a fiercely contested battle at Inukurthi the Velamas won the victory and put a large number of Kshatriyas to death mercilessly.

The fort of Jallipalli itself in 1361 A.D., when many Kshatriyas were massacred in retaliation for their treacherous action in killing Simgamanayaka I. The Velugoṭivarivamsavali graphically describes these incidents how Velama brothers performed the last rites of their father by offering libations to his spirit with the blood of Kshatriyas.

The achievements of Moluguru, Inukurthi and Jallipalli enhanced the stature and prestige of the two Velama chieftains in Telingana region. Enthused by the successes in the afore-said battles, the Velama brothers advanced further and started vigorously the annexation of the eastern and southern dominions of Kapaya Nayaka, the overlord of Telingana. By 1369 A.D. the date of the Aynavolu inscription of Anapotanayaka I, the two Velama warriors were already ruling over Warangal, Bhuvanagiri, Rachakonda and Singavaram and others. Kapaya Nayaka seems to have been encountered by Singa I himself earlier as we learn from a verse in Velugoṭivarivamsavali (v. 120).

The Velama chronicle categorically declares that the title Andhra suratrana was assumed by Anapota I after killing Kapayanayaka. The Ayanavolu inscription does not mention the afore-said title. The same inscription speaks of digvijaya-yatra of Anapota I by which time he was already ruling the afore-said important cities of Telingana region. Therefore, the last vestiges of the authority of Kapaya Nayaka may have been wiped out by Anapota I and his brother Mada I in the said digvijaya-yatra after the date of the Ayanavolu inscription. The Velama forces advanced in a southern direction to give a final blow to the overlord of Telingana. In a decisive contest fought at Bhimavaram near Warangal, Kapayanayaka was finally defeated and killed probably in the second half of 1369 A.D. After the death of Kapayanayaka Anapota assumed the title Anumanagantipura- varadhisvara and Andhra suratrana known otherwise as Hinduraya-suratrana.

Having demonstrated their power in the heart of Telangana, Anapota and Mada extended their sphere of activity to the eastern and southern borders of their kingdom. It is already stated that in the battle of Molugur in Chenjarla region many Reddi chieftains were killed by these Velama brothers. Probably, to take vengeance upon the Velamas for this, Anapota Reddi, the Reddi ruler of Kondaveedu seems to have marched against them sometime before 1364 A.D., but Madanayaka with the help of Naganayaka, his cousin and son of Echa, defeated them in the battle field at Dhanyakataka and the Reddi king was forced to flee for life. Subsequently Anavema seems to have made efforts to retrieve the prestige of the family and succeeded in extending his influence to the Vadapalli region on the northern bank of the Krishna as evidenced by the Reddi record dated A.D. 1377 (S 1299). Madanayaka I could not put up with these Reddi successes. In order to crush Anavemareddi permanently, the two Velama brothers Anapota and Mada planned an attack against the Reddi dominions. With a view to weaken the forces of Anavema Reddi and divert his attention, a two pronged attack was made. Anapota I appears to have marched in north-eastern direction against southern Kalinga of Reddi dominions as evidenced by his inscription dated S. 1302 at Simhachalam, while Madanayaka I marched southwards and attacked Anavema Reddi in person. In the battle that ensued Madanayaka caused the Reddi king to flee to his dominions never to return again. Madanayaka I annexed the Vadapalli region to his kingdom and made Krishna river the southern border of the Velama dominions.

Though there were as many as three Bahmani invasions against the Velama territory during the period under study these invasions did not affect the Velama dominions much. Anapota demanded the restitution of Kaulasa fort from Muhammad Shah I, by making alliance with Bukka I of Vijayanagara. The Bahmani king sent Bahadur Khan, who defeated Naganayaka, the cousin of Anapota and ravaged the whole country up to Warangal, but could not however dislodge Naganayaka from Kaulasa region. After the conclusion of his war with Vijayanagara, Muhammad Shah I re-attacked Kaulasa and Filampattan and killed Naganayaka, but the Telugu army succeeded in making the Sultan retreat and on his way back harassed him, killing most of his soldiers. There is a reference in Velugotivarivamsavali in which Anapota was praised for vanquishing Muslims outside the fort of Sindar. But again he had to face another invasion by the Bahmanis under the command of Malik Saif-ud-din. Having declined to engage the Musalman army, Anapota purchased peace by ceding Golkonda and its dependencies to the Bahmanis. The Velugotivarivamsavali mentions several successful encounters by Anapota against Musalman army, but it is not known on what occasions these encounters occurred. The Vamsavali also states that Madanayaka had jostled with Jangli Khan and defeated him in the battle that ensued. On the whole the Velamas had amicable relations with Bahmanis during this period.

The political career of Madanayaka, like that of his brother Anapota I, was a continuous period of wars, which earned for him the titles, samarasatyaki and pratyarthi-gayagovala. He was also a great builder. He made Madhava puram to the south of Devarakonda, his capital and ruled his dominions in close association with his elder brother. He constructed a Shiva temple at Umamaheswaram, the Northern gateway of Srisailam. He had a son by name Venna whom he had despatched to Skandadri (modern Kandikonda) to rule the region round Khammam as his viceroy. Mada I was faithfully served by a great minister Peddiraju's son Potaraju, who is described in the Umamaheswaram inscription as sarvasastravisarada. He seems to have personally supervised the construction of Shiva temple at Umamaheshwaram and set up an inscription recording the pious acts of the king Madanayaka. The inscription under study speaks about the construction of steps to a high hillock on the opposite bank of the Krishna at Srisailam at Jatararevu to make Srisailam accessible to pilgrims coming from the northern side. The late Sri M. Somasekhara Sarma on the basis of a verse in Rasárnavasudhakaram of Simga II harboured the view that Srisailam was included in the dominions of Anapota I.

The verse plainly means that Srisailam was made accessible to pilgrims, who came obviously from the northern side. The verse does not state that the steps were constructed "to the sacred mountain of Srisailam", as interpreted by the late Sri M.S. Sarma; but to a hillock on the opposite bank of Srisailam as evidenced from the inscription under study. Further, it may be noticed that in Srisailam proper (i.e., on the southern side) no inscription of these Velama chieftains has come to light so far. Therefore, the view of Sri M. S. Sarma that Srisailam was included in the dominions of Anapota I is not supported by facts. It may also be stated here that Rasarṇavasudhakaram of Simga II attributes the construction of steps to Anapota I, while the present inscription credits Madanayaka I, his younger brother, with this achievement. Maybe that Anapota I also constructed another flight of steps or Simga II did not find it improper to attribute the same achievement to his father instead of his uncle, as both of them ruled the kingdom in close association with each other.

Kandikonda Inscription of Vennabhupa by

M.Mukunda Rao, M.A., Hyderabad

The subjoined inscription is engraved on a slanting rock at the top of a hillock near Kandikonda village, Mahabubabad taluk, Warangal district, situated at a distance of 10 miles from Mahabubabad on the road to Khammam.

About the middle of the inscription some of the letters are in a jumbled condition. It runs into 19 lines. The inscription is not dated. However, there is another inscription of the same chief at the same place which was dated in S 1297. Hence the present inscription must also belong to the same time.

The lines are not even and the characters are not uniform in size. The letters in the first few lines are smaller than those in the subsequent part of the inscription. The alphabet is Telugu, which was in vogue in Telingana in the 14th century A.D. and does not call for any remarks. The language is Sanskrit and with the exception of avighnamastu, in the beginning, the rest of the inscription is entirely in verse. But some influence of Telugu is also noticeable. Thus the adjective form of the word 'Recherla' is used with the Telugu termination as 'Rechadi' (1.5). Similarly instead of 'Nayakasya', the Telugu form of 'Nayadasya' (1.8) is used. Visarga is represented both in Nagari form with two dots as well as the Telugu usage of two small zeros one below the other and thus we see ':' and 's'. The following orthographical points may also be noted. (1) The distinction between 'da', 'da' and 'dha' is not strictly observed. (2) '1' is used instead of 'da' as in 'Rechali'; correct form being 'Rechadi' (eg. I. 5) (3). There are some mistakes in the text as some of the words are repeated without any purport, eg. 'atapana' (11. 16, 17). (4) The Telugu letter rough 'r' is used (eg. as in 1. 4) 'Recharla' (5); Final 'm' is replaced by anusvara, though it occurs at the end of the pada (as in II 17, 18 etc).

The inscription begins with the invocation of the Varaha incarnation of Vishnu (lines 1-3). Then it refers to the Recharla family of the Sudra caste in which Simga was born. To him were born two sons, Anamta and Madhava; Anamta to Mádharma was what Balabhadra was to Krishna (4-7). To Madhava. was born a son to whom the worshipful Desika gave the name Venna (9-13).

Venna, who came to rule at 'Skandadri' at the instance of his father constructed a temple dedicated to the god 'Skandadrinatha' with his consorts Uma and Ganga the latter being represented by the water in the tank (14-19).

The following is the genealogy of the Recherla family given in the inscription.

In the Ainavolu and Umamaheshwaram inscriptions dated S. 1291 and 1298 respectively, the genealogy commences with Vennayya or Vennaya Nayaka. In the undated Vadapalli inscription of Madhava Nayaka and the Kandikonda inscription of his son Venna dated S. 1297, the genealogy is traced from Dacha, son of Vennayya as mentioned in the Ainavolu and Umamaheshwaram records.

The history of the Recherla family to which the chiefs mentioned in the present record belonged, is described in their family chronicle, the Velugoṭivárivamsávali. The descent of the Recherlas is traced in this work from Chevvi Reddi, the founder of the family, through Dama, Vennama, Era Dacha, and Simga to Annapota and Mada and the latter had a son called Peda Vedagiri. The genealogical tables described in these inscriptions and the Vamsavali may be represented thus for the purpose of comparison.

Venna

Of Chevvi Reddi, the progenitor of the family and his son Dama nothing is known from the inscriptions. Venna or Vennaya, the son of Dama, is mentioned, as noticed above, both in the Aynavolu and Umamaheshwaram epigraphs. The Velugotivarivamsavali refers to a victory of Dama over the Turushka armies. As all the Muslim invasions of Telingana during this period took place only in the reign of Kakatiya Prataparudra, he must have been a contemporary of that monarch. Erra Dacha, the son of Venna, appears to have been a powerful chief. According to the Velugotivarivamsavali, he along with his brother. Nalla Dacha, slew a chief called Kumtluri Immadi, who is otherwise unknown, near the village of Gollapalli. They are also said to have encountered the Pancha Pandyas in a battle at Kanchi. Probably they joined the Kakatiya army during Prataparudra's expedition to the south in A.D. 1316. Erra Dacha was succeeded by Simga, with whom begins the genealogy in the present inscription. He is said to have waged war on Matsa family, and killed Komma and Rudra in a battle at Magatala. Nothing is known of the Matsas, nor of the circumstances in which Simga came into conflict with him. He is also said to have inflicted a defeat on Kapaya Nayaka, who expelled the Muhammadans from Andhradesa, re-established the independence of the Andhras, and established himself at Warangal. Kapaya Nayaka probably made an unsuccessful attempt to put down the growing power of Simga and assert his authority over him. Simga also made war on the Kshatriya chiefs of Jallipalli, who, however, got rid of him by means of assassination.

Simga I, according to the present record, had two sons named Anamta and Madhava. They are, however, generally referred to in the inscriptions and the Velugotivarivamsavali as Anapota and Mada respectively. These two princes ruled their paternal kingdom jointly, although each had his respective sphere, which he governed practically as an independent ruler. The former established himself at Rajukonda, which was the capital of the kingdom and the latter at Devarakonda both in the Nalgonda district. Of the achievements of these chiefs, very little is said in the present inscription, though the Velugotivarivamsavali gives a long list of places and chiefs they had conquered; but very little is known of these places or of the chiefs from other sources.

The other Kandikonda epigraph refers to Māda Nayadu as Sōmakula-Parasurama, a title, which according to the Velugotivarivamsavali, he acquired by massacring the Kashatriyas of the Lunar race. Simga I, the father of Anapota and Māda, made war, as noticed already on the Kshatriyas of Jallipalli who belonged to the Lunar race, but was assassinated at their instance by a temple priest, of the name of Bommajiyya. Anapota and Mada, it is stated, killed at Jallipalli, the Kshatriyas of the lunar race and thereby acquired the title Somkula-Parasurama. Another important achievement of these two brothers, though not mentioned in the inscription under study, may be noticed here. They slew, according to the Velugotivarivamsavali, Kapaya Nayaka in a battle fought at Bhimavaram near Warangal. This is indirectly corroborated by the evidence of an inscription at Ainavolu dated A.D. 1369 in which Anapota claims to have set out on a digvijaya (conquest of the quarters), during the course of which he subjugated the forts of Warangal, Tribhuvanagiri, Rajukonda, Simgavaram, etc. It is evident from this that these chiefs overthrew Kapaya Nayaka, who liberated the Telugu country from the Musalmans and made themselves masters of the whole of Telingana.

According to the Velugotivarivamsavali, Anapota and Mada each had a son called respectively Simga II and Peda Vedagiri, who succeeded their parents in their respective capitals. The present record refers neither to Simga II nor Peda Vedagiri, but mentions Venna as a son of Mada. Evidently Venna was a brother of Peda Vedagiri whom his father sent to Skandadri to govern the fort on his behalf.

An interesting fact mentioned in the present record regarding Venna deserves particular notice. It is stated that he was given the name of Venna by a certain Desika, the preceptor of the learned. There is nothing in the inscription which discloses his identity. Tradition embedded in the Sri Vaishnava religious works seem to throw some light on the subject. The Velama chiefs of both Rajukonda and Devarakonda, who were staunch Sri-Vaishnavas kept themselves in touch with the acharyas of that faith at Srirangam. It is stated that the Vaishnava teacher Sri Vēdānta Dēsika expounded, on request by a son of Madhava, the philosophical doctrines of his faith in a work called Tattvasamesopasamhara specially composed for the purpose and sent it to him. Madhavatmaja who sent the request to Vedanta Desika has been identified by the later Sri-Vaishnava commentators as Sarvajna Simgabhupala. This is obviously a mistake; for none of the Simgabhupalas who ruled this period was the son of Madhava. Simga I was the son of Erra Dacha; Simga II and III were the sons of Anapōta I and Anapota II respectively. It is not unlikely that the son of Madhava for whom Vēdānta Dēsika composed his Tattvasamdesōpasamhara was none other than Venna, of the inscription under study. The great Vaishnava teacher, if we can depend on the evidence of this inscription, seems to have taken an interest in the prince ever since childhood.

This inscription is on a stone pillar lying near the Muthyalamma temple. The inscription is very damaged. After invoking the god Varaha, it introduces the chiefs of the Recherla family, Era Dacha, Singa and his son Madhava and the latter's son Vedagiri. This last named chief is said to be ruling the country lying between Srisaila and Vindhya mountains. He is stated to have made the grant of the agrahara named Morupnuntula to the god Mallari. Certain Manchena bhattu, otherwise known by his title [Nissamkula] Bharati son of Narayana Somayajulu of Brahmanapalli wrote this inscription. The Velama chief Vedagiri is obviously Peda Vedagiri or Vidagiri I of the Devarakonda branch of the family.

This inscription is on a pillar erected on the bund of a tank called Maisamma cheruvu. It begins with the invocation of Gods Ganesa, Vishnu and Shiva. It introduces the family of the chiefs belonging to the Recherla of the fourth caste and introduces the chief Dachaya and his son Madhava. Among his many sons Vedagiri became the lord of the Earth. His son was Madhava who possessed the title "Khadga Narayana". His son was again Vedagiri II, who possessed the title Soma kula Parasurama, Jagadhala Vibhla, Hindu Suratrana. His brother was Lingama Nayaka. He possessed the title Medini Varaha i.e. the uplifter of the earth which was taken away by the Yavanas [Muslims]. He had a minister named Tippaya.

Lingamanayaka's wife Gouri was described in a few verses. She is said to have made several gifts to several Gods at Srisailam and Tirumala and performed several charities according to the prescription of Hemadri [Dharmasastra]. She is said to have caused a tank named Gaura Samudra to be excavated, evidently where the present inscription was set up. In the concluding verses the tank was described.

The record also mentions the Gajapati's, Asvapati's (Bahmanis) and Narapati's (Vijayanagara) kingdoms. The inscription was composed by Ahobala Sukavi, son of Machinarya, grandson of Niramkusa Bharati bhattopadhyaya, who in turn was the son of Machanarya and grand son of Narayana Somayaji of Bharadvaja gotra.

This village is in the Ramannapet taluq of Nalgonda district. A stone pillar containing this inscription on its three sides, is erected on the village tank-bund.

The inscription is in Sanskrit verse and Telugu characters and the entire portion is in a state of good preservation. There are twentyseven verses in the inscription. They are composed by the poet named Sambhunatha son of Madhava and grandson of Soma (verse 27).

The date of the inscription is given in verse 25 as Saka 1351 Saumya Chaitra corresponding to A.D. 1429, March-April. The day is mentioned as Subhadina which may mean any auspicious day in the month.

The record belongs to Nagambika, wife of king Ravu Madhava of the Rachakonda Velama lineage, some members of which are already known by the Aynavolu, Inugurti and other inscriptions. These chiefs served under the Kakatiyas and rose to prominence at the time of Rudramamba who appointed them as subordinates at Rachakonda. The first four verses praise the boar incarnation of Vishnu, Rama and the Supreme Lord Vishnu from whose feet the family took its birth. Era Dacha is described in the fifth verse. Singa and Anavota are his son and grandson respectively. Anavota's son is Singa again. Singa's son is named Ravu Madhava. His greatness is described in verses 10 to 16, wherein he is described as a great devotee of Rama. In the next verse it is said that he had composed a commentary named Raghavaiah on Ramayana and dedicated the same to the feet of Rama in the month of Ashwayuja of Plavanga year corresponding to Saka 1349 and A.D. 1427. His wife comes from Kadipikonda family and is named Nagama. She constructed a tank called Nagasamudra near Rachakonda. The tank is described in verses 21 to 24.

The record introduces a new line of family members, probably scions of the Recharla family. According to the inscription, certain Annasauri, who was an embodiment of all virtues, has four brothers viz. Mallaya, Venna, Kacha and Anavota. Among them Anna Suri was the eldest and had 3 sons through his wife Mallamamba. Namely Nagaya, Kachaya and Machana.

Among them, Nagaya had 3 sons viz. Katcha, Pannaya and Linga through his wife Akkamamba. Among them Pannaya was attributed with more titles of virtue which closely resemble those of Recherla vamsa chiefs of Rachakonda and Devarakonda. Pannaya had a daughter by name Kasavamba, who was an embodiment of all virtues and had a beautiful face which resembled the Moon. The record also mentions that Kasavamba married Sultan Allauddin and acquired the status of the queen. It is interesting that a hindu princess married a Sultan, that too from a ruling family during the late mediaeval period. She had a daughter by name Jayi who excavated a canal in the vicinity of the village Daripalli for the merit of all human beings and for the merit of her maternal grandfather. The text was composed by the poet Praudha Bharati.

The second part of the record contains a lengthy Prashasti of the Velama Chiefs.

The importance of the inscription is that it furnishes the genealogy of a new line of kings not encountered so far in the mediaeval history of Andhra. It records the Recherla Prashasti along with epithets to Pannanka, besides that, he and his grandfather Anna Sauri belonged to the Recherla Velama family, who ruled Telangana region during 14th-15th c.A.D.

This long but incomplete inscription belongs to the Recherla chiefs, and records the gift of the village of Muccherla together with Mandapalle in Kothagattu sthala included, in the Voruganti Sima, with all the rights together with all the cultivators (Krishi valulu) on the occasion of lunar eclipse to God Tiruvengalesvara of Macherla and to 12 Ayyangars and 12 Mahajanas both numbering 24 by Ravu Dharma Naidu's son of Pinnamanayadu and Singamamba, grandson of Peda Anapotanayaka. The chief bears all the usual titles of the Recherla chiefs including, Kakatirajya Sthapana Acharya. The gifted village was divided into 34 vrittis of which 10 vrittis were allotted for the God Tiruvengalesvara of Macherla. 12 vrittis to Ayyangars and 12 vrittis to Mahajana and for the 24 murtis. On the second side, the name of the donors with their gotras and pedigrees are given.

This is dated in S. 1386, Tarona, Vaisakha Su. 15. Vaddavara, Lunar eclipse; corresponding to Sunday 21st April, 1464 A.D.

Chimakurti Plate of Vema

by

A. Rangaswami Saraswati, B.A. and N. Lakshminarayan Rao, M.A.

This plate was secured on a loan from the Karnam of Chimakurti in the Ongole Taluk of the Guntur District in the year 1920. It is a single copper plate with no rim, oblong in shape and a little broken at the bottom. It is 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ `` in length and 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ `` in breadth. There is a very small hole at the top of the plate to allow a string to pass through. Only one side of the plate bears the writing. At the top of the plate are engraved the figure of a linga and bull facing it. The weight of the plate is 37 tolas.

The inscription on the plate is written in Telugu characters and language except the two imprecatory verses at the end which are in Sanskrit. The alphabet and orthography of the document bear close resemblance to those of the Tottaramudi plates of Kataya-Vema and the Phirangipuram inscription of Komati-Vema though these two are later in point of time. It is therefore likely that the present document is a later copy of the original, though it is nowhere stated so. There seems to be no objection however, to take the historical facts contained in it as correct, for the birudas of king Vema found here, which give all the historical information, are almost similar to those found in his Amaravati inscription. The inscription records the grant of the village Ramatirtham situated in the Srisaila Bhumi and the Ammanarhbrolu-sims as a sare-agrahara to Chittamuri Timmana Bhatta who was the son of Kamesvara-Bhattaraka and who belonged to the Kaundinya-gotra, Yajus sakha and Apastamba-sutra. Besides this the donee was granted a fourth portion of the produce of the wetlands, betel-leaf gardens and sugar cane fields, of each of the five villages Chimakurti, Bhimasvaram, Pulikonda, Mailavaram and Kumarapuri and a sixteenth portion of the produce of the remaining three-fourths. A fifth part of the money income of these villages and the water of the Pedda-cheruvu (big tank) were to be given to him. Over and above these the donee was to receive one-tenth of the produce of the other villages and land at the rate of 200 kunta measured by a pole of 16 baru in big villages and 100 kunta in small villages. It is interesting to note that the present Karnam of the village Chimakurti who is now in possession of this copper-plate claims to be a lineal descendant of the donee and is still employing some of the gifts registered in the plate.

The date of the document is Salivahana Saka year 1257, Yuva Karttika su. 12, Thursday, Manvadi. This is the earliest record of the king being earlier by 10 years than the Madras Museum plates of the same king. If the cycle year Dhatu is substituted for Yuva the details of the date would correspond to A.D. 1336 October 31, Thursday.

The importance of the document lies chiefly in the fact that some of the king's birudas mentioned in it would, if they are properly interpreted, yield new information about the history of the Reddi chiefs. For instance, Chamchumala-churakara or chemjimala-churakara as given in the Amaravati inscription means "one who reduced the hill fort of Chemji or Gingi". How Vema could reduce this fort will be shown below. Another biruda Rechuridsrgavibhala means "the destroyer of the fort of Rachuru" i.e. Rayachur in the Nizam's Dominions. A third title in the list Kalin-garaya-mana-merdana means "one who destroyed the pride of the King of Kalinga". The title Masaiyaraya-mriya-tentakara means 'one who hunted like deer the chiefs of Manniya hilly country'. The term Manne is generally applied in later Telugu literature to the hilly tracts near the eastern ghats in the Godavari, Vizagapatam and Ganjam districts. Similarly, the titles Voddiyaraya-airdkuma-dhasan and Jantaraataraya-halla-kalldla signify victorious over the kings of the Voddiya (Odhra) country, the modern Orissa and the Janturnadu which is perhaps the modern name of Dantapura-nadu. Dantapura was an early capital of the Gangas of Kalinga, from which, for instance, the Narasapatam place of Vajrahasta II was issued. The title Pan-dyaraya-gaja-simha means "one who was a lion to the elephant in the form of the Pandya King" suggesting thereby that the king probably routed the Pandyas. The title Appaya-Gopaya-disapatta seems to signify some victory won by the king or his immediate ancestors over the chiefs called Appaya and Gopaya. The Tiruvendipuram inscription of the Chola king Rajaraja III dated in his 10th year records the victories of two Hoysala generals Jagnobbaganda Appana-Dandanayaka and Samudra-Gopaya Dantayaka over the Pallava chief Kopperunjinga who overcome the Chola sovereign Rajaraja III and had for a time kept him Prisoner at Sendamangalam. The chiefs that are referred to in the title Appaya-Gopaya-disapatta of Vema seem to be identical with the Hoysala generals of the Tiruvendipuram inscription.

The exploits referred to in the titles of Vema must have been achieved by him or by his ancestors while they were the subordinates of the Kakatiyas. During the days of the decline of the Cholas all the neighbouring powers attempted to capture as much of the territory as possible. The Pallava general Kopperunjinga who endeavoured to establish for a time an independent kingdom extended his conquests over the territories of the Cholas of Nellore and other chieftains as far north as Draksharama where an inscription of his is found. The Cholas of the Nellore District who had the titles Madhurantaka-Potappi-Chola and Gandagopala extended their kingdom to the south and, for a time, occupied Kanchipuram and Tondaimandalam. Against these Sundara Pandya led an expedition from the South and celebrated the anointment of heroes at Vikramasimhapuram (Nellore). The Kakatiya sovereign Ganapati made an expedition first in aid of one of the Telugu Chola chiefs of Nellore and later on to Conjeevaram, where his inscriptions are found. After Ganapathi his successor Rudramba and later her successor Prataparudra continued the campaign on Conjeevaram. The triumph claimed in these birudas over the Pandya king and Hoysala generals Appaya and Gopaya should also have been won during this period of constant warfare. Similarly, the victory over Klingeraya, Oddiyaraya, the Janturnataraya as well as the reduction of the fort of Rachuru should have been achieved in the war of the Kakatiyas against the surrounding countries.

The inscription also says that vema founded many agraharas on the banks of the rivers Brahmakundi (the Gundlakamma), the Krishnaveni, i.e., Krishna, the Godavari and the Mahandi, and laid out gardens in the vicinity of various towns. We are further informed that he gave food in charity houses (sattras) in many holy places and built steps to the famous shrines of Sri Parvata and Ahobala. Vema is called in these inscriptions the lord of the Eastern Sea, the establisher of the sole sovereign (eka-raya-sthapan-acharya) and the only ornament to the throne (eka-simhasan-alamkara).

It records the excavation of a tank in the village Darapalli named Pamnasamudram, evidently named after the Chief Pamna, a later member of the velama family, ruling from Devadripattana. It gives the genealogy of the chief Pamna, but with 2 or 3 breaks. The family of this chief bears the Prasasti of the Velama chief who ruled over Telangana in the post Kakatiya period. Incidentally it gives information about the relationship between the Velama chiefs and Bahamani Sultans during the 15th century A.D.

This inscription is on a pillar in a field by the side of the tank in the village. The inscription is illegible and careless in execution. It introduces four brothers named Anna, Mallaya, Vennaya and Kacha of Yaduvamsa. Of these brothers the eldest son names Anna, Mallaya, Vennaya and Kacha of Yaduvamsa. Of these brothers, the eldest married Mallamamba and begot three sons named Nagaya, Kasavya and Machaya. The eldest son married Nagamamba. He begot three sons Kachana, Pannaya and Limga. Or these sons Pandya, son of Nagaya gave his daughter in marriage to the Bahmani king Allauddin. The inscription records the construction of a tank name pannasamudra in Daripalli village by Kesavamba queen of Allauddin for the prosperity of their daughter Jayi.

The telugu portion of the record is interesting as it gives the titles of the Velama chiefs in the traditional narrative such as Hinduraya Suratrana, Somakula Parasurama and Kakaturaya Sthapanacharyya and obviously attributing these titles to Panna, father of Kasavamba who was ruling from Devadri Pattana.

The composer of the record is Praudha Bharati who was offered some Vrittis. The genealogy is as follows:

Warangal Inscription of Raghudeva, Kali Year 4561

(1 Plate)

by

D.C. Sircar, Ootacamund
(Received on 12.5.1958)

Many of the imperial ruling families of the Deccan had their capitals in the former Hyderabad State now merged in the Mysore, Andhra Pradesh and Bombay States. Thus Manyakheta of the Rashtrakutas, Kalyana of the Later Chalukyas and Kalachuris, Devagiri of the Yadavas and Anumakonda and Varamgallu of the Kakatiyas were all situated in different parts of the former State of Hyderabad. It was therefore expected that the area, if properly explored, would yield a large number of interesting inscriptions. In the course of the exploration of a very small part of the area in 1957-58, Mr. K. H. V. Sarma and Pandit V. S. Subrahmanyam, both Epigraphical Assistants in the Office of the Government Epigraphist for India, visited Warangal and copied some inscriptions that were found at the place. One of these inscriptions from Warangal is edited in the following pages. D.C. Sircar is thankful to Mr. Sarma and Pandit Subrahmanyam for the assistance they have rendered him in the preparation of this article.

About 150 years ago, Mackenzie's Pandits copied the inscription and their tentative transcript finds a place in the Mackenzie Manuscripts, 15-4-5. p. 106 (cf. Bharati, Vol. XII, Part i. pp. 426 ff). Unfortunately, the Pandits could not read the epigraph satisfactorily.

The inscription is divided into two parts, the first engraved on the right wall of the gate of the Warangal fort while the second part is incised on the left wall of the same structure. The first part contains ten lines of writing covering an area about first five feet in length and two feet and one inch in height. There are only eight lines in the second part which covers a space about six feet and six inches long and one foot and eight inches high. The epigraph is continued from the first to the second part. The preservation of the writing is not satisfactory as the letters are rubbed off in many parts of the record.

The characters of the inscription are Telugu. Initial a has a rather peculiar form resembling modern Telugu lg in shape. But the language is Oriya which is, however, considerably influenced by Sanskrit. There are many errors in the language and orthography of the record. The date, quoted in lines 2-5, is Saturday (Briha-rasara). Mrigasira-nakahatra, Magha-su.10, in the year Pramathin which is mentioned as corresponding to the Kali year included by the defective passage yekasatad-adhika-pamcha-sat-ottara-chartu (h)-sahasra-parmite*. The expression pamcha-sat-Ottara (i.e. 'with the addition of 500') qualifying chatur-sahasra (i.e. 4,000) in the same context suggests that the number intended in yekasatad-adhika qualifying pamcha-sata should be less than hundred. The word yeka (eka, 'one') forming the first part of this expression clearly suggests that the intended number is one of those immediately following 10 or any of its multiples between 20 and 90. But the name Pramathin applied to the year, which apparently corresponded to one of the Kali years from 4501 to 4599, shows that the kali year 4561 current (i.e. Kali 4560 expired) is intended since no other year in the said period of 99 years corresponds to the cyclic year Pramathin of the South Indian calendar. Saturday, Magha-su. 10, Mrigasira-nakshatra, in Kali 4561 current, corresponds regularly to the 2nd February, 1460 A.D.

The proposed emendation of yekasatad-adhika as ekashashty-adhika is supported by the internal evidence of the inscription. As will be seen below, the record mentions Raghudeva, the governor of Rajahmundry under Gajapati Kapilesvara of Orissa, in connection with the Oriya conquest of the fortress of Vorungallu in the land (rajya) of Varamgallu, i.e. the Warangal fort. The occupation of Warangal by the Oriyas is mentioned in another inscription in the fort, referring to its conquest by Kapilesvara's son Hambira and bearing the date Pramathin, Magha-su. 10. Va (i.e. Vadda-vara, Saturday) which is exactly the same as the date of the record under study. There is no doubt that both the inscriptions refer to the same event, viz. The conquest of the Warangal fort by the generals of Gajapati Kapilesvara. It may be that Hambira was chief commander of the Gajapati forces and that Raghudeva was the second in command. It is interesting to note that Hambira's inscription is found on the eastern gate of the Warangal fort while Raghudeva's record is incised on its western gate, locally known as the fifth gate. This appears to show that the two leaders of the Gajapati forces led the attack on the Warangal fort from two different sides. Raghudeva, the Oriya government of Rajahmundry, is also known from several of his inscriptions bearing dates in the sixth decade of the fifteenth century.

The object of the inscription is recorded in two sentences in the last two lines (lines 17-18). The concluding part of the first of these sentences is very much damaged. But it seems to read as Vorumgamti-durgga-patimku sadhila in which sadhila (past tense of the Oriya verb sadhiva) has no doubt been used in the sense of 'Subdued' or 'defeated'. It is therefore stated here that Raghudeva-narendra subdued the lord of the Vorungamti-durga (i.e. the Warangal fort). The second sentence says that he spared the lives of the governor of the fort and the latter's followers (yihara sasainga sahitya jiva-dana dila). The conquest of Warangal by the generals of Kapilesvara is one of the events in the struggle between the Bhamanis of Gulbarga and the Gajapatis of Orissa.

The inscription is interesting from several points of view. In the first place, it represents the god Vishnu as the imperial ruler of the earth and apparently as the overlord of the emperor Kapilesvara of the Suryavamsi Gajapati family of Orissa. The date of the record has been put against the background of eternity as it is represented as falling in the eternal reign period of the said god. This is because of the fact, as we have shown elsewhere, that Ganga Anangabhima III (c. 1211-38 A.D.) dedicated his kingdom in favour of the god Purushottama-Jagannatha of Puri, who is regarded as a form of Vishnu, and that the Ganga king's successors as well as the later imperial rulers of Orissa including their theoretical successors, the present Maharajas of Puri, regarded themselves as the viceroys of the deity who was considered the real lord of the country. This conception is noticed in several inscriptions of the Ganga dynasty. The present epigraph is the only record outside the Ganga family, which echoes the same idea. There is, however, a slight difference in the conception as found in the inscription under review. The god is not represented here as the lord of the kingdom of Orissa with the king as his viceroy. The idea expressed in our record is that the god was lord of the earth while Kapileswara, endowed with imperial style, was the king of the Utkala country under him. This mode of introducing a king is possibly the only case of the kind in the whole range of Indian epigraphy.

The second point of interest in the record is its style which exhibits an influence of certain inscriptions of the Gangas. Some of the passages in Kapileswara's description in the present inscription are copied from records like the Draksharama, Bhubaneswar and Kanchipuram inscriptions of Anangabhima III and one of the Kapilas inscriptions of Narasimha I (c 1238-64 A.D.). The most interesting among these epithets are those which speak of the king as Mheswara-putra, Purushottama-putra and Durga-putra. In the similar representation of Angabhima III and his son Narasimha I, one may notice the fact that these kings, in spite of their staunch devotion to the god Vishnu in the shape of Purushottama-Jagannatha of Puri, could not possibly dissociate themselves totally from the Siva learnings of their ancestors. Since, however, the hold of Vaishnavism became gradually stronger and stronger on the kings of Orissa, it is rather strange that the same epithets were applied to Kapileswara who flourished two centuries later. But this may be explained by the suggestion that the Suryavamsi's were also Saivas originally. It has, however, to be noticed that a similar description of Kapileswara is not noticed in any other inscription of the Suryavamsi Gajapati family.

Are we then to suppose that the reason underlying the above description of Kapileswara was the Saiva learnings of Raghudeva? It will be seen from our analysis below that Raghudeva calls himself sri-Durga-varaputra as well as sri-Jagannathadiva (labdha.)vara-prasada*. He also bore the typical Saivite name Virabhadra. This prince as well as his father and grandfather are further represented as devotees of the god Mallinatha and the goddess Ganamangalachandi or Mangalachandi. These two deities are probably to be identified respectively with Siva and Parvati since the name Mallinatha is known to be often applied to a Siva-linga and Chandi and Mangalachandi are both well-known names of the said goddess. As Raghudeva's grandfather was Kapileswara's father, it is possible to think that the family was originally Saiva and that Kapileswara was the first of its members, who was devoted to the god Purushottama Jagannatha, Kapileswara may have become a devotee of the said deity after his accession to the throne of Gajapati Bhanu IV, since theoretically the Ganga throne belonged to the god.

The first section of the inscription in lines 1-5 gives the date, viz, Saturday, Magha-su. 10, Mrigasira-nakshatra in the year 4561 current (in words) in the first quarter of Kali which is one of the four ages, the name of the year being Pramathin. This year is mentioned with reference to the victorious reign of the illustrious god Vishnu just as is done in the case of dates falling in the reigns of particular kings. In consonance with this interesting reference, the date is stated to have fallen in the second Parardha of the god Brahman, in the Svetavaraha Kalpa and the twenty eighth Chatur-yuga of the Vaivasvata Manvantra. Lines 5-6 likewise mention the locality, where the inscription was put up, in an equally grand setting. The concluding part of this passage cannot be fully deciphered. But it seems to speak of the tract of Varumgallu (Warangal) within the domination of Umainusaha (saha) described as the Suratana of Kalubaraga, i.e. the Bahmani Sultan Humayan Shah (1458-61 A.D.) of Gulbarga. This land is stated to have been situated in the western tract of the Andhra country which formed a part of Bharatavarsha lying in the Jambudvipa section of the earth. This is in consonance with the old conception according to which Jambu-dvipa was one of the four or seven dripas constituting the earth. The representation of a locality in a similar setting, is however, not unknown in South

Indian inscriptions. Thus, an inscription of 1077 A.D. gives the situation of the capital of the Kadambas of Banavasi in the following words: “Among the fourteen worlds is the middle world, one rajju in extent. In the centre of that middle world is the Golden Mountain, to the south of which is the Bharata land, in which like the curls of the lady earth shines the Kuntala country, to which an ornament (with various natural beauties) is Banavasi”.

The next passage in lines 7-17 introduces Raghudeva-narendra who was responsible for the setting up of the record. First is mentioned in lines 7-8 Jagesvaradeva-maharaya described as a devotee of the god Mallinatha and the goddess Ganamangalachandi. Next is described Jagevara's son Pratapa-Kapilesvaradeva-maharaja in lines 8-14. Kapilesvara is stated to have become a lord of the Utkala country at the command of the illustrious Purushottama described as the lord of the fourteen worlds, i.e. the god Purushottama-Jagannatha of Puri. Next, he is described as ‘the son of Maheswara (Siva)’, ‘the son of Purushottama (Vishnu)’ and ‘the son of Durga.’ As already indicated above, these epithets and some others in the description of Kapileswara appear to have been borrowed from certain records of the Ganga king Anangabhima III and his son and successor Narasimha I. In the inscription under study, Kapileswara is endowed with the imperial title Maharajadhiraja-Parameswara and is described as belonging to the solar race. He is further called sri-visa-Gajapati (the Ganapati who is an illustrious hero), Gaudesvara (lord of Gunda) and vijitanavakati-Karnt-esvara (lord of the Karnatanine-crore country conquered by him). It is interesting to note that Kalavarag-esvara (i.e. the lord of Gulbarga) is not added here to Kapilesvara's epithets as in other records. This is probably how the inscription was set up in an area belonging to the dominions of the Bahmani Sultans of Gulbarga and the local people were expected to sneer at the hollowness of the claim.

Kapileswara was the first independent imperial ruler of the family and Raghudeva is known to have been his younger brother's son and his victory at Rajahmundry. The mention of Jagesvara as a moharaya (i.e. maharaja) shows that he was also a ruling chief. This is supported by the evidence of the Raghudevapura grant. Lines 14-15 of our inscription mention Parasuramadeva as the younger brother of Kapileswara and as devotee of Mallinathadeva and Mangalachandi (elsewhere called Ganamangalachandi). Parasuramadeva-roya's son Raghudeva is mentioned in the following lines. He is called Virabhadra Raghudeva-narendra and is described as a devotee of the god Mallinathadeva and the goddess Ganamangalachandi and also as having been a favourite son of the goddess Durga and as favoured by Jagannathadeva, i.e. the god Purushottama-Jagannatha of Puri. It is further stated that Raghudeva was the ruler of Rajamahendravara, i.e. Rajamahendrapura, which is the modern Rajahmundry. As already indicated above, the object of the inscription is recorded in the last two lines (lines 17-18) which states that Raghudeva subdued the governor of the Warangal fort but that he spread the lives of the said Bahmani officer and his soldiers.

The god Mallinatha seems to have been the family deity of the ancestors of Kapileswara. Since Malinatha as the name of a deity is very popular in the Telugu speaking areas and not in Orissa, the original home of the Suryavamsi Ganapati family may have been in the Andhra country. As we have elsewhere suggested, the mother of Kapilesvara was probably born in the Velama community of Andhra.

The genealogy of the Suryavamsi Gajapatis of Orissa supplied by the present inscription represented Kapileswara and Parasurama as the son of Jagesvara and Raghudeva, governor of Rajahmundry, as the son of Parsurama. This information is already available from the Raghudevapura and Dorapalem grants of Raghudeva edited above. But Raghudeva's secondary name Virabhadra is known only from the present record.

The geographical names mentioned in the inscription have already been discussed above.

Warangal inscription of Ambira-deva

by

DR. P. Srinivasachar, M.A., Ph.D. (Lond.)

This inscription is on the stone gateway on the western side of the Warangal fort. The text of the inscription has already been published in South Inscriptions, Vol. VII, p. 372, but there are several mistakes in it.

The inscription is in Telugu prose and commemorates the capture of Warangal fort by Ambira-deva-Kumara-mahapatra, the son of Kapilendra-deva, the Gajapati king of Orissa, who came to the throne in A.D. 1335-6. The date of the capture is given as Pramadi, Magha, Suddha dasami, Saturday. The date is a sound one and corresponds to Saturday the 2nd of February A.D. 1460. Dasami on that day was 24, that is, 14 ghatikas or 5 hours and 45 minutes after sunrise on that day.

The inscription is important as it confirms the statement of Firishta that the Gajapati king intervened in the political affairs of Telingana to the detriment of the interests of the Bahmani kingdom. Firishta states that when the Bahmani forces besieged Devarakonda, the Gajapati king sent some forces to help the ruler of Devarakonda. It was probably this same expeditionary force that marched to Warangal after relieving Devarakonda, and under the command of Ambira-deva succeeded in capturing the Warangal fort. The name of the fort, Varumgallu, is interesting as a development from Orugallu.

Translation

[LI. 1-7] (In the cyclic) year Pramadi, (in the month of) Magha (on the) tenth (day, of the) bright (fortnight) (on) Saturday, Ambira-deva-kumara-mahapatra son of the Gajapati (king) Kapilemdra-maharaja, captured the fort of Varum(ga)llu.

Note on the Warangal Inscription of Ambira-deva.

This small inscription raises up a number of problems for discussion. The first relates to the identity of Ambira-deva, who is said to have captured Warangal. The second refers to the circumstances that led to the siege of Warangal and its capture, and the last to the identity of the person who was ruling Warangal, at the time of its capture.

Before we go into these historical problems there is one small point about the date which has to be discussed, namely the meaning of the term Vadda-varamu. Although this term is by no means new, and has been known for the past 30 or 40 years, Mr. G. Ramadoss finds it difficult to accept the usual meaning, and has suggested a different reading of the inscription altogether. The matter has been discussed by Kielhorn, Fleet, and Rice long ago, and the occurrence of this term in a large number of inscriptions published since that time, confirms definitely that Vadda-varamu means Saturday. Since this term occurs in several places with all the other details of the date it is easy to calculate the date and verify that this term refers to Saturday. Besides, we have instances of bilingual inscriptions where this term occurs in the Vernacular portion (Telugu or Kannada) of the inscription, while in the corresponding Sanskrit portion the term Sani-vara or Sanaiscara-vara is given. This definitely proves that Vadda-varamu is the same as Sani-vara or Saturday.

Let us now take the first historical problem relating to the identity of the captor of Warangal. The present inscription gives his name as Ambira-deva kumara-mahapatra, and refers to him in no uncertain terms as the son of the 'Gajapati (king) Kapilendra-maharaya.' Mr. Ramadoss argues that the passage refers to two persons, the first an unnamed son of the Gajapati king Kapilendra maharaya, and the second a certain general Ambira-deva by name, who is identical with the father of Daksina-Kapileswara. The sequence of the passage suggests more naturally that the phrase Gajapati-Kapilendra-mahārāyala-kumārunda relates to the name Ambira-dēva following immediately, and is its visesana. As a matter of fact there is a slight blemish of the rock adjoining the letter da (I.4), leaving us in doubt as to whether the scribe intended to write da or du. The language of the inscription is very concise, and full of abbreviations. So it looks as though the scribe wanted at first to join the two words in sandhi, but later on changed his mind. It is not probable that such uncertainty would have arisen if the passage really referred to two persons. Further, it is extremely unlikely that a distinguished son of the Gajapati king, who took part in a distant campaign and came out successful, would have remained unnamed and incognito even when an inscription was engraved to commemorate this success, leaving his general a free road to honour and fame. The inevitable conclusion, therefore, is that the inscription refers only to one person, and that he was the son of the Gajapati king Kapilendra, the founder of the Gajapati dynasty of Orissa.

The question then arises as to what led the Gajapati king to send an expedition against Warangal. According to Firishta the Gajapati king sent reinforcements to the Raja of Devarakonda, when the latter was attacked by the Bahmani ruler, Humayun Shah. So it is probable that after defeating the Bahmani army and raising the siege of Devarakonda the expeditionary force marched against Warangal, the other important fortress in Telingana, and captured it.

The statement of the above inscription that Ambira-deva captured the fort of Warangal suggests that the fort must have been in the hands of the Bahmani rulers. If, on the other hand, the fort had been under an independent Hindu chieftain as Devarakonda was, and Ambira-deva had gone there to give succour to the besieged and raise the siege, Ambira-deva could not have stated that he captured the fort.

Firishta says that the motive that led the Gajapati king to help the Raja of Devarakonda was the temptation of the 'offers of great sums of money' by the Raja of Devarakonda. We must note however that this was not by any means the first occasion for the Gajapati king to assume a hostile attitude towards the Bahmani king without any apparent provocation from him. A few details about the relations between Kapilendra and the Bahmani kingdom will make it clear.

An important source of the history of the reign of Kapilendra, an Oriya work called Madaḷā panji, says that Kapilendra was considerably aided by the Bahmani king in usurping the Ganga throne, and in becoming the king of Orissa. The friendly relations between the two seem to have continued till the middle of the Fifteenth century, when we find them making a joint attack on Vijayanagara at the beginning of the reign of Mallikarjuna. But such a friendly attitude could not have long subsisted between two growing neighbouring powers, both of which were intent on expansion. The earliest evidence of this changed attitude is an inscription in the Jagannath temple at Puri, dated in the 19th anka, Mesa, New-moon, Sunday, (corresponding to April 12, A.D. 1450), which says, 'having conquered the side of Mallika Parisa, on the journey back gave to God a sari cloth known as Pundariksha gopa. The reference is undoubtedly to the Bahmani ruler and the name cited is either a general term applied to Muslim rulers (Malik Padusa), or the name of a particular general. Madala pañiji mentions the conquest of 'Mallika country' in the year denoted by the 21st anka. This might be another instance of hostility on the part of the Gajapati ruler two years later, or it might refer to the same incident as the above, provided we accept that the 21st anka is probably a mistake for the 19th anka, as suggested by Manmohan Cakravarti.

The Bahmani rulers on the other hand do not seem to have been anxious to involve themselves in hostilities with the Gajapati king. Even when active nobles like Sanjar Khan busied themselves in fighting the 'Uriah leader of the infidels of Telingana', the Sultan was not very enthusiastic about it and used to say:- 'Why does Sanjar Khan match himself in battle against the possessor of elephants?' But since the disappearance of the Warangal kingdom made the Bahmani and the Orissa kingdoms neighbours, there were probably frequent skirmishes, in some of which Gana-deva seems to have distinguished himself. It is on the basis of some such incident that he claims in his Kondaveedu plates to have defeated two Muslim soldiers. The relations between the two kingdoms thus became more and more hostile from day to day, and when Humayan Shah marched against Devarakonda to punish the Raja for being in league with the rebel, Sikandar Khan, the Gajapati king, who had already consolidated his Southern conquests in a strong governorship at Kondaveedu, was eager to avail himself of any opportunity for intervention. Such an opportunity presented itself to him when the Raja of Devarakonda sought his help, and promised to pay in return a large sum of money. The king of Orissa responded quickly to such a request and sent a strong force ('a considerable body of troops with several war elephants'), 'promising to advance quickly himself with his whole force'. The Bahmani forces who came to know of this acted under some excitement, and were severely defeated. Unluckily for the Sultan, a serious rebellion broke out and he had to proceed at once to the capital leaving the Gajapati army an open field. It is unlikely that under such circumstances the Gajapati army would have returned home quickly, content with the money they probably obtained from Devarakonda. The next important fortress in Telingana was Warangal, and they evidently marched on it fully knowing that the Sultan could not do anything to resist them. Warangal was easily captured.

Firishta says that before proceeding on to the capital, the Sultan left behind him able minister Mahmud Gawan 'to protect Telingana'. It is necessary therefore to investigate more carefully into the circumstances of the capture of the fort of Warangal, and find out whether the failure to hold the fort against Ambira-dera must be attributed to the able Mahmud Gawan or to somebody else. But before we go into the circumstances relating to the capture of this fort we may note briefly as to how and when this fort came into the hands of the Bahmani rulers.

We know that at the time of the rise of the Bahmani kingdom, Warangal was an independent chieftaincy under the rule of Kapaya Nayaka. This ruler was on friendly terms with the Bahmani kingdom, and even supplied him with some elephants, on the latter's request. Of course we hear of the Sultan setting out on an expedition to conquer Telingana, but it is related only to the region around Bhongir, and not Warangal. However, hostilities arose between these two kingdoms before long, and the expansion of the Bahmani kingdom eastwards was regarded by the Warangal ruler to be an encroachment on his own territory. Warangal began to act in concert with Vijayanagara, and in the reign of Muhammad I (1358-1373) war commenced, which ultimately ended in the submission of the Warangal kingdom. Peace was restored on the payment of a large sum of money to the Bahmani ruler as indemnity, after ceding Golconda and its dependencies, and presenting a rich and valuable throne. It is not clearly stated whether Warangal retained its independence. The Burhan-i-Ma'asir states, 'In the latter days of his reign (i.e., the reign of Muhammad I, 1358-1373) being seized with the desire of conquering Telingana the whole of the country came into the possession of the agents of his government'. This statement might imply that Warangal was made a feudatory state, but it seems probable that till at least the beginning of the reign of Ahmad (1422-1435) Warangal remained independent intriguing with Vijayanagara against the Bahmani kingdom, and proving itself a veritable thorn on the side of the Bahmani kingdom.

Soon after his accession, Ahmad proceeded against Telingana. According to Firishta, Khan A'zam who had proceeded against Warangal in advance with a small army defeated and slew the king of Warangal and obtained possession of the place. 'The king moved to Wurungole, and took possession of those treasures, the accumulation of ages, which had till then been preserved from plunder'. The king then rewarded Khan A'zam suitably and 'detached him to reduce the remainder of Telingana, which he affected in the space of four months, and returned to join the king at Warangal. Khan A'zam was now left to reduce some strong posts in possession of the deceased Ray's heirs, while the king proceeded to Koolburga'. These events are dated in A.H. 828 (1424 A.D.). But Burhan-i-Ma'asir gives a different account of Ahmad's campaign against Warangal. The chief who 'was the most intelligent of the infidels of that country', saw that in whatever direction the victorious army turned 'it brought destruction to the disobedient'; so foreseeing and dreading the attack of the royal army, he sent a deputation of his chief men to the foot of the throne, and by the interest of the confidential servants of the court, represented his readiness to submit to the Sultan's authority and to pay tribute if his offences were pardoned.

The Sultan in his mercy pardoned the inhabitants of the fort, and after taking security prohibited his troops from plundering it'. A close examination of the above passage shows that it refers to an expedition different to the one described by Firishta-probably an earlier expedition. The above passage occurs in an account of the general campaign against Telingana, and obviously refers to Ahmad's early efforts to bring the country under his authority. Such a general campaign was necessary, because, in the words of the Burhan-i Ma'asir' in the latter days of the late king, Firuz Shah, on account of the weakness which arose in the affairs of the country owing to the frequent wars' there were rebellions in several parts of the country. Some parts of the country seem to have actually broken off from allegiance to the Sultan. But the campaign described by Firishta is a specific attack on Warangal as a punishment for helping the kingdom of Vijayanagara. While in his first campaign, as described in the Burhan-i-Ma'asir, the Sultan was merciful and desisted from plunder, on the second occasion he took possession of those treasures, the accumulation of ages, which had till then been preserved from plunder.

There is another passage in the Burhan-i-Ma'asir itself which confirms this second campaign, although curiously it precedes the account of the first expedition. The passage runs as follows: 'When the report of his (Sultan Ahmad's) approach reached the infidels of that country, washing their hands of life, they crept into their forts and bye-paths. The Sultan penetrated to the farthest limits of Tilang (Telingana) and took the fortresses of Mandal and Warangal which are among the principal forts of that country', and ravaged them. It is obvious that this passage refers only to the events narrated by Firishta. It is noteworthy that the Sultan left the Rajas of Devarakonda and Rachakouda in peace, on promise of tribute, but put an end to the kingdom of Warangal, thus clearly showing that he meant to punish Warangal severely for a special offence, namely treacherous intrigues with the enemy kingdom of Vijayanagara.

The disappearance of Warangal as a separate kingdom is seen from the fact that in the reign of the next Bahmani king (i.e. Alau-d-din), Sanjar Khan was fighting the 'Uriah leader of Telingana', who had 'nearly two hundred thousand elephants'. This could be none other than the Gajapati king, and the way in which he is referred to shows that he was the ruler of the neighbouring kingdom. This could have been the case only if the Warangal kingdom had ceased to exist.

It is possible that Warangal tried to regain its independence, since Devarakonda and perhaps a few other petty chieftaincies still remained independent and encouraged every attempt at rebellion. Devarakonda was now the principal kingdom in Telingana, and it set about intriguing against the Bahmant kingdom. It is tot unlikely that under such circumstances, the people of Warangal also should participate in some of these intrigues. Firishta distinctly says that when Humayun decided to punish the Raja of Devarakouda, for being 'in league with' the noble Sikandar Khan, he sent Khwaja Jahan and Nizam-ul-mulk with an army to Devarakonda, and himself marched against Warangal. It is clear therefore that Warangal also had a hand in the revolt of Sikandar Khan.

Humayun evidently did not have much difficulty in dealing with Warangal. There was no siege or battle and nothing to indicate the terrible punishment that would have been inflicted by Humayun, if there had been any considerable opposition to enrage the Sultan. According to Firishta the Sultan was still here when Khwaja Jahan and Nizam-ul-Mulk brought him the news of the Muslim defeat at Devarakonda at the hands of the combined forces of Devarakonda and Orissa. The Sultan gave vent to his wrath on his unfortunate generals, but his preparations to march against Devarakonda were put an end to by the news of a rebellion at home.

We have already seen that Humayan left behind his trusted minister Mabmud Gawan to protect Telingana. But it is not possible to conclude from this that this able minister was wasting away his time in Warangal while his master was facing a serious rebellion at home. Besides, it does not seem probable that Warangal would have capitulated so easily if Mahund Gawan was in charge of it at the time of its siege by the Gajapati forces, It is extremely probable therefore that Mahmud Gawan left Warangal soon to go to the capital, and that Warangal was left in the hands of someone else whom the Sultan could trust to fill a position for which he had at first assigned no less a person than Mabmod Gawan.

There is only one person whom the Sultan could have entrusted with such a task, and that is Sarang khan. He was one of the 'new Musalmans', a captive of Sanjar Khan in his 'wars with the infidels' in the previous reign. According to the Burhan-i-Ma'asir he was a brahmin youth who was converted to Muhammadanism and was given the name of Hasan and the surname of Bahri. 'He was a youth adorned with beauty both of person and disposition, and ornamented with perfect sagacity and shrewdness; on him was conferred the title of Sarang Khan'. It is not clear as to what is meant by the statement that he was 'promoted to high dignity'. It could not have been a mere title. A previous passage, obviously referring to him, says that he was 'prompted to the rank of amir'. It is not too much to expect that the sultan placed him in charge of Warangal when Muhmud Gawan left for the capital.

We do not know what happened to Sarang Khan later on. After speaking of him the Burhan-i Ma'asir suddenly goes on to say, 'Historians have related that Shitab Khan, one of the Sultan's amirs having fled for his life, the Sultan, on the 27th of the month of Ramadan, 'cruelly punished the inmates of his harem.' Who was this Shitab Khan and why did he flee for his life? The author of the Burhan-i-Ma'asir himself does not seem to be quite clear on this point. Nor do we know why this incident relating to Shitab Khan was related immediately after speaking about Sarang Khan. One is tempted to identify these two personas as one and the same especially since an identification fits in well with facts so far known, and explain one or two obscure points in the history of a later person of the name of Shitab Khan.

The existence of two names for the same person may be justified in this case, since the name Shitab Khan probably refers to his 'quick rise' (shitab) in life, and such a characterization would be quite true of Sarang Khan. Besides, we do not know the name of Sarang Khan before his convention and if it was Sitadu or Sitrapati as tradition asserts, then it is very probable that in common parlance the Hinds called him Shitab Khan. It is probable that the existence of this double name raised some doubts in the mind of the author of the Burhan-i-Ma`asir, and led him to speak of these events as referring to two persons.

The name Shitab Khan is woven up in legend and mystery and we have a great mass of evidence, some of it mutually contradictory, all relating to a person or persons bearing that name. It is necessary therefore to go into one or two details before we can be sure of the identity of this amir of Humayun, called Sarung Khan and Shtab Khan.

The evidence relating to Shitab Khan may be divided into four distinct groups, the first relating to Shitab Khan of about A.D. 1460, the amir of the Bahmani ruler Humayun, and the second to the hero of the Warangal inscription dated A.D. 1504. The third group of evidence relates to the opponent of Krsna-deva-raya of Vijayanagara about A.D. 1516, during his Kalinga campaigns, and the last to the contemporary of Ibrahim Qutb Shah for whom we have the date A.D. 1570.

According to Dr. Hirananda Sastri the first two groups of evidence refer to one and the same person, while the last relates to a second person of that name. It is not clear as to which of these two is the opponent of Krsna-deva-raya, referred to the third group of evidence. Considerations of chronology are not very helpful for identifying the amir of Humayun of c. A.D. 1460 with the opponent of Krsna-deva-raya of c. A.D. 1516. As pointed out by Dr. Hirananda the evidence of the poem Krsna-raya-vijayammu and the historical work Raya-vacakamu is emphatic in stating that Shitab Khan encountered Krsna-deva-raya when he led an expedition against Orissa, and that he impeded Krsna-deva-raya's progress considerably in the ghats with his foot archers. Krishna-deva-raya led several expeditions against the king of Orissa and it is not clear on what this incident occurred. In any case it cannot be earlier than A.D. 1516; and even then it is impossible to imagine that Shitab Khan was still active and capable of resisting a powerful king like Krsna-deva-raya of Vijayanagara, if we hold that he was really the same person as the man who started his life in a humble way, was captured and converted in the time of Alla-d-din, and rose to high power under his successor ultimately running away an unfortunate failure.

There is another difficulty in identifying the amir of Humayun with the opponent of Krsna-dēva-raya. It seems to be extremely probable that Shitab Khan mentioned in the Warangal inscription of A.D. 1504 is the same as the opponent of Krsna-dēva-raya, and that after being finally driven away by Sultan Quli Qutb Shah he entered the service of the Gajapati king of Orissa and kept on harassing, first, the ruler of Golconda, and later, Kṛṣṇa-dēva-raya of Vijayanagara. Firishta seems to support this view. Now, this Shitab Khan was an ardent Hindu as seen from his Warangal inscription and other sources. Firishta calls him an infidel making it quite clear that he was not a Muhammadan. Ekaśilanagara Kaifiyat, however, states definitely that Shitab Khan was a hater of the Hindus and also of the Kakatiyas. It further adds 'he destroyed the temples of Caturmukheśvara, the Thousand pillar temple, and other temples built by the Kākatiyas'. Such a description holds good of the amir of Humayun, because after his conversion in the time of Humayun's father he seems to have stayed on at the court and become a favourite of Humayun who raised him to power.

There is no evidence at all of his apostatising, or joining the Gajapati king (after fleeing for his life from Warangal), or even of his reconquering Warangal at some future date. However, in trying to identify the amir of Humayun with the hero of the Warangal inscription Dr. Hirananda Sastri was led to explain away the evidence of the Ekasilanagara Kaifiyat on the ground that low caste people like the boyas-to which caste Shitab Khan is said to have belonged-were 'not very scrupulous for caste rules'. Such a statement is true only in a limited sense, and further it is not clear why, simply because he was of low origin, 'he might have incurred the displeasure of high caste people', and begun to 'hate them'. Even if we admit that he was not particular about caste restrictions being a boya, we cannot explain away his destroying the temple of Caturmukheśvara, the Thousand-pillar temple and other temples built by the Kakatiyas.

It is impossible to identify this temple destroyer with the person who reinstated 'the mother of the world' who had been 'removed from her place by the wicked Turushkas'. There is nothing in common between this 'hater of Hindus' (who was himself a Hindu by birth) and the donor 'who always gives (gifts) in plenty with ease and greatness to crores of Brahmans', and who 'pleases all the wise (persons) by the charities (mentioned) by Hemadri'. It is clear therefore that the person mentioned in the Ekasilanagara Kaifiyat cannot be the same as the person mentioned in the Warangal inscription of A.D. 1504. The former is most probably the same as the amir of Humayun referred to as Sarang Khan and Shitab Khan, who loyally served his loving master and probably put up a good defence against Ambira-dēva, by improving the defences of the fort and completing the construction of the stone fort left unfinished by Pratiparudra, with the materials obtained from the numerous existing temples. Unfortunately, however, his master was busy with a serious revolt, and alone and unaided, without even the confidence of the people whom he had alienated by his hatred, this man was attempting an impossible task in facing the formidable Gajapati army under Ambira-deva, fresh from the victory at Devarakonda. When he could no longer resist, he fled for his life unable to face the wrath of his master, and left the fort to be captured by Ambira-deva.

The two epigraphs are engraved on the eastern and western gates of the fort at Warangal and refer to the capture of the fort by the Gajapati army. The one on the western gate belongs to Virabhadra Raghudeva, son of Parasurama, who was the younger brother of the Gajapati Kapileswara and the son of Jagesvara. The record is dated in the Kali year 4561, Pramathin (A.D. 1460) and states that Warangal lay within the dominions of Humayun Shah. Sultan of Kalubarega (Gulbarga). The other inscription, set up about the same time, on the eastern gate mentions prince Hamvira-mahapatra, son of Kapilesa Gajapati, and states that he captured the fort.

The famous Shitap Khan inscription (Hyderabad Archaeological Series No. 9) records the capture of Warangal called Ekopala and restoration of the temples of the god Panchala Raya and the goddess Kakati by Chittapa Khana. The genealogy and greatness of Chittapa Khan are given in detail. Chittap Khan was a subordinate of Prataparudra Gajapati and he figures in the Rayavachakamu as an opponent of Krishnadevaraya during his Telangana campaign Chittapa Khana was not a Mahammadan chief as his name indicates, but a Hindu ruler of Bhogi kula called Sitapati who was ruling over a certain part of Telangana from his capital at Rachakonda.

This inscription is situated near the Southern Torana, Sambunigudi. The inscription records the exploits of Chittapakhana of the Bhogi-kula, son of Manaya and Gauramba and grandson of Naga. He conquered Rajadri and other forts. Having vanquished the Muhammadans, wrested from them the beautiful city of Ekasilapuri formerly ruled by the Kakatiya kings. For the worship of the gods and brahmanas he reinstalled the images of the god Panchalaraya (Krishna), of the goddess Kakati the Lakshmi of the Kakatiya kingdom, and of Siva, the primaeval and self-existent of lord removed by the Turushkas in their respective shrines. Chittapakhana had two wives, Devambika and Anumamba. By the former he had two sons, Avadutakhan and Puramtaka; and by the latter he had three sons, Amara, Bhogi and Rama. The inscription was composed by Madhava, son of Annarya of Apastamba-sutra and Bharadvaja-gotra and was set up on Adivara, Magha su.5 of the year Rudhirodgari, Saka 1425 (Sunday, 21st January, A.D. 1564).

It was obviously under orders of his father Harihara that Prince Devaraya undertook this campaign of Conquest. The Velugoyivarivamsavali alludes to a number of clashes of the Velamas, who sided with the Bahmani Sultans, with the Vijayanagara kings (Further Sources of Vijayanagara History, Vol. I, pp. 82-83). The Panugallu inscription (cf. op.cit., Vol. II, pp. 38-39), dated 6 months later than this record, refers to the capture of the fort of Panungal by Immadi Bukka, assisted by his son Ananta.

Kaleshwaram Inscription of Devaraya I, Saka 1319

(1 Plate)

by

N.Venkataramanayya, Hyderabad
 (Received on 8.1.1962)

The inscription, is inscribed on a pillar in the 16 pillared mandapa of the Muktesvara temple at Kaleshwaram in the Manthani Taluk, Karimnagar District, present Telangana state. It consists of a little over five lines of writing in Telugu characters prevalent in the coastal districts of the Andhra country in the early part of the 15th century A.D. It appears to be slightly damaged on the right hand corner at the top, and embodies a single Sanskrit verse in the Sardulavikridita metre. The first line begins with a cypher, which perhaps is the auspicious symbol for siddham or Om. It has a few mistakes. Except for the omission of a single letter `dra` after `cham` in the chronogram `nidhi-chaam-visva` there is nothing else in it which calls for notice. From a grammatical point of view, the inscription may be considered imperfect as the verse lacks a finite verb, kurvan (1.3), the only verb in it being infinitive. The finite verb has to be supplied to complete the sense of the sentence. It records that king Devaraya, son of Harihara, while celebrating the festival of the conquest of the quarters (dig-vijaya) at Kalesvara on the bank of Gautami (i.e. Godavari) made the gift of the tulapurusha on Samyavasara, the first day of the year Iavara, corresponding to the Saka years nidhi (9), chandra (I), and Visva (13), that is the Saka year 1319. The date is quite regular. It corresponds to Wednesday, 28th, February 1397 A.D.

The inscription is of considerable historical importance, as it brings to light for the first time a hitherto unknown expedition of Devaraya, which appears to have spread victoriously through Telingana to Kaleshwaram on the banks of the Godavari, king Devaraya, son of Harihara, mentioned in this inscription is obviously Devaraya I son of Harihara II of Vijayanagara. At the time of the expedition recorded in it, Harihara II was still ruling the empire and Devaraya was governing the eastern province of the Udayagiri rajya. Kalesvaram where Devaraya celebrated the festival of his digvijaya, was situated at the time in the territories of the Velama kings of Telingana. The cause of the expedition must be sought in the enmity that existed between them and the Rayas of Vijayanagara, on account of the former's alliance with the Bahmani Sultans of Gulbarga, the hereditary foes of the Rayas. Lakshmana Pandita, the Pranacharya of Bukka II, son and heir-apparent of Harihara II, attributes, as a matter of fact, the cause of the hostility to the defiant attitude and the pride of the Andhra ruler, on account of the accession of strength by his alliance with the Yavana (Muhammadans). This alliance was extremely distasteful to Harihara II, as it gave an advantage to the Bahmani Sultan in his wars with Vijayanagara. The Velamas on their part cherished their friendship with the Sultan.

The poet Visvesvara, who flourished in the court of Singa II of Rajukonda refers with pride in the introduction of his Chamatkarachandrika, to the amity that prevailed between his patron and the Patasikanripati (the Bahmani Sultan). Harihara II made a persistent attempt to break this alliance. He sent no less than three expeditions including the one referred to in the present inscription against the Velamas to achieve this objective. The expedition described in the present record is, as far as it is known, the second of the series. The first expedition was sent some time before Saka 1306, Raktakshi, 1384 A.D. from Vijayanagara under the command of Bukka II. It penetrated into the heart of Telingana, and reached Kotta konda, a place in the north-west of Warangal. Singa II Sarvajna and his cousin Vedagiri I of Devarakonda with the help of the military force obtained from the Bhamani Sultan opposed the invention. In an engagement which took place at Kotta konda between the Bahmani forces and the Vijayanagara army, the latter appears to have sustained defeat. Saliva Ramaya-deva, son of Saluva Kayadeva Maharaja, one of the officers in charge of the expedition, perished in the fight. It was probably on this occasion that Vedagiri I had, as stated in the Velugotivari vamsavali, slain the enemies in the neighbourhood of Warangal.

The defeat at Kotta Konda appears to have been decisive, for, Harihara II did not renew for several years subsequently to the failure of the expedition, his attack on the Velamas of Telingana. A favourable opportunity, however, offered itself during the last years of his reign. The Bahmani kingdom was torn by internal dissensions. During the last year (1396-97 A.D.) of the reign of Muhammad II, a rebellion broke out at Sagar, and the rebels defeated the Sultan's army thrice; the fortress, however, fell at least into the hands of the Sultan not by force, but by treachery. Soon after this Victory, the Sultan died of fever on 21st Rajab, A.H. 799 (20th April, A.D. 1397). He was succeeded by his two sons Ghiyas-ud-din and Shams-ud-din, who reigned for a few months each; one after the other and were dethroned as a result of palace revolutions. It was the time when Harihara II could launch an attack on the Velamas, with every chance of success, as the latter would not be able to get much help from their ally, the Bahmani Sultan. To accomplish his objective, he sent two expeditions, more or less simultaneously- one from the south under his son Devaraya, the Governor of Udayagiri, and the other from the west under his heir apparent, Bukka II- against the Velama territories. Of the two expeditions, the former, whose triumphant expedition except that it penetrated successfully through the Velama territories and reached the Godavari at Kaleshwaram. Devaraya must have started from Udayagiri, the headquarters of his viceroyalty in the Nellore district, and passed through the kingdom of the Reddies of Kondaveedu, which lay between the Velama and Vijayanagara territories, before he reached the target of his attack. How Devaraya affected the passage of his troops through foreign territory, whether it was by force or by peaceful agreement, cannot be ascertained in the present state of knowledge.

More information is available about the other expedition which set out from Vijayanagara under the command of Immadi Bukka or Bukka II. Lakshmana Pandita, in the introduction to his Vaidyarajavallabham edited above, describes Bukka II's expedition at some length:

“The army with its flags hosted swords flourished, and the noises of drums and conches accompanied by a medley of neighbours, and trumpeting quickly and completely surrounded the city of the Andhra King”.

“This roused the manliness of the Turushkas, who swiftly mounted their horses and began a deadly fight with their bows, and shook the van of the enemy's forces”.

“Then the battle grew by steps in intensity and swords and arrows were freely employed.....”

“When the army of the Rakshasas in human form (Turushkas) has been shattered by the warriors of king Bukka, even the Andhra ruler gladly takes upon his head the lotus-like feet (of Bukka), the treasure that saves him in distress.

“Thus did he (Bukka) Conquer all the kings of the four quarters beginning with the Andhra ruler.....”

Lakshmana Pandita does not mention the name of the city of the Andhra king which Bukka II surrounded with his army, and where he fought a battle with the Turushkas (Muhammadans) and defeated them in the fight: but his inscription at Panagallu (Pangal in Mahboobnagar district) makes it clear that it was at this fort belonging to the Velama king, that he defeated the Turushkas; for it is stated that the city of Lord Sambhu, Panugallu, defended by many Turushka warriors and stone ramparts was conquered by him (Harihara's son, Bukka) on Sunday in, the bright half of the month of Bhadrapada in the year Isvara (which was) the Saka year represented by treasures (9), moon (1), fires (3), and moon (1) (Saka 1319), corresponding to 3rd September, A.D. 1397.

It is evident from what is stated above that the Vijayanagara expedition against the Velama kingdom from the event was as successful as that launched under the command of Devaraya from the south.

The Tulapurusha-maha-dana performed by Devaraya at Kaleshwaram on the occasion of the festival celebrating his conquest of quarters (dig-vijaya-otsava) is one of the sixteen major gifts (maha-dana) described in the Puranas and by Hemadri in his Danakhanda.

Panugallu Inscription of the Time of Harihara II, Saka 1319

(1 Plate)

by

V.S. Subrahmanyam, Ootacamund (Ooty)

(Received on 24.7.1964)

The inscription edited below is engraved at the bottom of the right wall of the gateway, the fort on the hill at Panugallu in Kolhapur Taluk of Mahabubnagar District. There is also a copy of this record, engraved on a rock outside the same gateway, which has been edited and discussed by some scholars previously. But since the historical significance of the inscription has not been properly made out by these scholars it is edited here with the kind permission of the Government Epigraphist for India, giving the text of the former copy.

The copy chosen for study here is in 11 lines and covers an area of 2.35 m X 55 cm, while the other one is in 8 lines and occupies a space 2.90 m long and 33 cm broad. Both copies are written in Telugu characters, normal for the period. The letters of the copy edited here are each about 4 cm high while those of the other copy are each about 3 cm high. The language the record is Sanskrit and is in verse except for the passage containing the obeisance.

As regards orthography, the anusuara is used for class nasal in several places; in some places the anusvara is used unnecessarily as for instance varemnya for varenya (line 5); the consonant following r is generally doubled (e.g., lines 3, 5, 8, 11); and the spelling of alamkritam for alamkr̥itam (line 7) and of Yummadi for Immudi (line 10) are due to the influence of local pronunciation.

The record refers to the reign of Harihara II, son of Bukka of the Sangama dynasty of Vijayanagara. The object of the inscription is to record the conquest of Panugallu by the Dviguna-Bukka. The details of the date of the conquest are given as Saka 1319 (expressed by chronogram), Isvara, Pausha (Sahasya), su. 11 (Sambhor=dina), Sunday, corresponding to the 30th December 1397 A.D.

The record commences with obeisance to the preceptors followed by verse 1 invoking the goddess of earth. Verse 2 is in praise of the god Ganapati and in the next verse the ruling king Harihara II is introduced as the son of Bukka I. This king's chief minister Baicha-dandadhipa is described in verse 4. Verse 5 states that king Harihara appointed Irugapa, the son of Baicha, as his commander-in-chief (dandadhinathescara). In verse 6 the younger brother of Irugapa named Dviguna-Bukkana is described simply as a ruler (bhumipala) although the territory over which he ruled is not specified. Verse 7 informs us of his conquest, on the date given above, of Panugallu from the Muhammadan warriors. Verse 8 introduces one Anantakshamapati the son of Immadi Bukka, evidently the same as Dviguna Bukka figuring in the previous verse.

Though the purpose for introducing him here is not clear enough, the manner and the context in which he is introduced appear to suggest that he assisted his father in the captives of Pangallu. Verse 9 states that this Immadi-Bukka, having conquered Panugallu, arranged for its establishment with tanks, ramparts, step-wells and gateways provided with several contrivations.

Regarding the identification of Dviguna-Bukka or Immadi-Bakka in this record, two views have been expressed by scholars. The first view is of M. Ramakrishna Kavi, according to which the word tasya in tasya=anuja of verse 6 denotes Harihara who is mentioned in the previous verse and Dviguna-Bukka of this verse is the younger brother of that king. This view was accepted by scholars like M. Somasekhara Sarma. According to the second view, the word tasya denotes Irugapa and therefore Dviguna-Bukka was the younger brother of Irugapa. Although this view has been referred to by K.H.V. Sarma, he was more inclined to accept the other view. From the point of view of the grammatical construction of the passage, the word tasya in verse 6 can denote only Irugapa who is described in the second half of verse 5 which immediately precedes. Again the word tasya cannot denote king Harihara because he is mentioned in the first half of verse 5. Moreover, to take Dviguna-Bukka as a younger brother of Harihara II would go against the known facts of history as the latter had no brother bearing that name. In order to solve this problem some scholars have tried to amend the reading tasya-anuja into tasya=atmaja and have taken Dviguna-Bukka of the record under study to be the son of Harihara II. Owing to the fact that in both the copies of the record the expression tasya-anuja is clearly written and that the word tasya of even this amended reading can only grammatically denote Irugapa as has been pointed out above, this emendation defeats its purpose. Therefore, Dviguna-Bukka of our record is none else than the brother of Irugapa dandadhipa and is the same as Immadi-Bukka or Bukkana described as a younger brother of Irugapa in two other records, one from Hampi and the other from Shravanabelagola.

The epigraph is important in that it records the conquest of Panugalla in Saka 1319 by Immadi-Bukka during the time of Harihara II and mentions for the first time Ananta, the son of Immadi-Bukka during the time of Harihara II and mentions for the first time, the son of Immadi-Bukka.

The only geographical place-names occurring in this record is Panugallu which is evidently the place where the epigraph is found.

The Changadu Grant of Immadi Narasimha

by

Dr. N. Ramesan, M.A., Ph.D., IAS.

The present set of copper plates was discovered in a village near Wanaparthy of Mahaboobnagar district. These were retrieved and brought to me a year ago. They are now on display in the Epigraphy Section of the Government Archaeological Museum in the public Gardens at Hyderabad.

The inscription is engraved upon two copper plates. The letters are bold and legible. The plates are numbered in letters. In the middle of the plates, there is a semi-circular protuberance with a small hole in between which apparently passed the ring holding the plates together. The ends of the ring are brought together and soldered to a circular seat both of which seem to have been lost. The weight of each of the plates is 1.012 grams. The plates measure 19 X 11 X 0.5 centimetres.

The plates are also numbered seriality. The plates contain letters denoting numbers 3 and 4 which are clearly seen. There are in all 100 lines of writing distributed as follows:

The entire writing is in Nagari script and Sanskrit verse except for the last three lines which contain information about the boundaries of the village, and which are written in what the inscription itself says as “the desa dhasha”, There are in all 40 verses in Sanskrit. Verses 1, 9 and 13 are in the Sardulavikritdita metre, verse 6 is in the Upajati metre, verses 7 and 8 are in the Indravajra metre, verse 11 in the Vasanta Tilaka metre, and all the rest of the 33 verses are in the Anushtup metre.

The language used in the verses is very stilted and laboured. Many of the upamas and comparisons given are highly artificial. As a literary effort, the present inscription is of a very poor quality.

The grant starts in the middle of a verse containing the pratasti of Sriman Nrisimhesvara, who is apparently the father of Immadi Narasimha, the donor of the present grant. The first verse in Sardulavikritdita makes an allegorical comparison about the pearls that are scattered in the battlefield from the heads of the elephants of the enemies who are slain by the King. In the second verse the description of the glory of the King is continued. It is stated that the King became a `dharavaraha` or the boar of the world, by uplifting the earth from the ocean of wicked kings. It also mentions that the King was a `saluva` by smiting the crowd of his enemies, like a flight of the birds. This perhaps is a reference to the tradition that the title `salua` was due to the fact that Nrisimharaya's ancestors acted as fowlers to the early Kings of Vijayanagar empire. In the third verse, it is stated that the title of the King `Barbarabahu` became full meaning, because his powerful hands became rough through killing of the enemies and the making of gifts to the needy. There is a pun on the word `dana` in this verse which means both `cutting` and also a `gift`. In the next fourth verse, it is stated that the king by conquering (and excelling in making gifts), the five divine trees with the fingers of his hand, and ringing the bells five times (in celebration of his five-fold victory) became `panchaghanta-ninada`. In the fifth verse a reference is made to the King who by wielding his weapons became `Mururayaraganda` by making through his valour, three kings Chara, Chora, Pandya afraid on the battlefield. Chara the Chora apparently for Chera, and Chola. In the sixth verse it is stated that the king was Lord Narayana in reality by virtue of his title `Chauhatta-malla, dharanivurahta, Chalukya-narayana and Mohana-Murari`.

In the 7th verse, it is stated that the king made several gifts to several people in the sacred places of Srisaila, Kanchipura and Hemakuta.

The next two verses eight and nine give details about queen Sri Narasimha and the birth of a son to him by name Immadi Narasimha. The name of the Queen is given as Srirangamamba and she was said to be full of good qualities `gunabhirama`. She is stated to have become the consort of the king like Goddess Lakshmi who became consort of Sauri or Lord Narayana. Goddess Girija, the consort Lord Sambhu, Chhayadevi consort Surya and Sachi consort of Jishnu or Indra. The next verse states that, to this royal couple, Immadi Narasimha was born, even as Skanda was born to Gauri by Isvara, and Jayanta to Sachi by Hari or Indra. It is also stated that Immadi Narasimha by excelling even his father was so noble in generosity, valour and other innumerable good qualities, made his name literally true. Here is a play on the word `Immadi` which means `the second` as well as a `double`.

The next tenth verse carries the prasasti of Immadi Narasimhendra. It is stated that the sun and moon of the glory of this king travelled even beyond the traditional Chakravala mountains, from which two celestial planets are said to arise. In the next verse, it is stated that the fire valour of the King killed his enemies in the battle. Such as those who fled and who took shelter in the forests, in the ocean, and allegorically the hearts of their beloved, were further burnt by the forest fire dava by the badaba fire of the ocean and by the tapagni of the fire of sorrow the beloved ladies. In the next twelfth verse, it is stated that Immadi Narasimha who was praised learned men, ascended his father's throne, which rose on the Hemakuta [mountain] even the divine tree perfumed with flowers (adorns) the mount Meru which abounds golden peaks (hemakuta). The next thirteenth verse carries further the praise of Immadi Narasimhendra referring to the sixteen varieties of gifts or danas which he gave daily, his many gifts during his childhood and his universal fame.

The next nine verses from the fourteenth to the twenty second give details of the purpose of the grant which was a dana of an agrahara by the King on the occasion of a lunar eclipse. From the details given, it is seen that the donee was born in Gautamavamsa, and was the great grandson of one Narayana who is said to be a gem among Maha-yajnas. Sri Narayana's son was Sri Lakshmana Bhatta, who is said to be a treasure of tapas. His son was Tiruvengada Bhatta and the donee was Porairi Bhatta who was the son of Thiruvengada Bhatta.

The year of the grant is given as the Saka year denoted by the numbers represented by ritu (or season 6), netra (or eyes 2), yuga (or period of time 4) and Indu (moon 1). The name of the cyclic year is given as Rudhirodagri, month as Phalguna, the tithi as Pournamasya and the day of week as Guruvara or Thursday. On this day, there occurred a lunar eclipse, and the King, who was desirous of making budhana on the occasion of the lunar eclipse, granted the village `Agarupattu` otherwise known as `Changadi` near the tank by name Kaveripaka and was situated to the north of Kshira-nadi or Palar in the Padavedu Maharajya. The village was renamed as Immadi Srinarasimhendrapura and was granted as an agrahara with all the traditional eight rights to be enjoyed by the donee permanently and by his sons and grandsons etc. The third plate closes with the statement that the village was granted by the king himself along with gold and water, which is the traditional manner of making a gift.

The next plate four gives some other donees. From the matter in the plate, it is not clear as to the relationship between them and Paureri Bhatta, the earlier named donee. Apparently, the donees in this further list were also given some land in the same agrahara village.

From verses twenty-three to thirty-nine, we get the following details about the further donees:

(several previous enjoyers (adikshetrina) of different gotras Who is to enjoy $\frac{1}{8}$ th share).

In addition to the above, the carpenter of the village or tvashtha who was the engraver of the grant or sasana-lekhaka by Mallanarya, son of Viranacharya was also given a kani of land.

The grant then proceeds to say that the boundaries of this agrahara village with all the boundary marks or chinhas starting from the eastern direction, are given the desa bhasha. The next three lines, however, merely state in Kannada and Telugu languages, that the name of the sarvamanya agrahara of Changadi village was changed as Immadi Narasimhendragrahara. But the boundaries themselves are not mentioned.

The grant historically is of great importance. Including this, there are 4 copper plate grants of King Immadi Narasimha, son of Nrisimhendra, who founded the Saluva line of kings of the Vijayanagara empire. Another copper plate grant known as the Devulapalli grant of Immadi Narasimha is published in Epigraphia Indica Volume VIII.

Some details are known to us about the Saluva chiefs from the Telugu books Jaimini-Bharatam and the Varaha Puranam. The former book was dedicated to Immadi Narasimha's father Nrisimhendraraya also called Narasinga Raya and the latter to Nrisimharaya (Narasa Nayaka) of the Tulu family, who afterwards became the founder of the great Tulu dynasty of Vijayanagar which attained great fame under Krishnadevaraya, Achyutaraya etc.

The first dynasty of Vijayanagara or the Sangama dynasty came to an end in 1485 A.D. After Devaraya II of the Sangama dynasty, his son Mallikarjuna and after him, Virupaksha son of Pratapa Devaraya ruled, the former till 1465 A.D. and the latter till 1485 A.D. During the reign of these kings there was more or less a political chaos in the Deccan. During this period at about 1482 A.D., Mahmud Shah II of the Bahmani Kingdom succeeded to the Bidar throne. He being a boy of 12 years his reign was only nominal. Before long, the great chiefs of the empire, threw off their allegiance (to a central authority) and five separate kingdoms arose in the Deccan out of the dissolution of the Bahmani kingdom viz., the Adil Shahis of Bijapur, the Baird Shahs of Bidar, the Imad Shahs of Birar, the Nizam Shahs of Ahmadnagar, and the Qutub Shahis of Golconda. It is a curious coincidence of history that this milieu occurred after the fall of the first dynasty of Vijayanagara and before the rise of the third, the great Tulu dynasty. This Saluva dynasty which in between lasted only for two decades or so, came to an end by about 1506 A.D.

The details of the Saluva dynasty are available to us, from the two Telugu works mentioned above. The Saluva dynasty traces its origin from Saluva Mangu, who was a general of Kumara Kampana. He was succeeded to the throne by Gunda III, who in turn, was succeeded by Saluva Narasimha, who was the governor of Chandragiri and who usurped the Vijayanagara throne and ruled from 1486 to 1491 A.D. His son was Immadi Narasimha II who ruled from 1491 to 1506 A.D. The real power however rested with the commander Narasa Nayaka of the Tuluva dynasty. His son, Tuluva Vira Narasimha usurped the throne again and ruled from 1506 A.D. to 1509 A.D. He was succeeded by his famous brother Sri Krishnadevaraya.

This second or Saluva dynasty was in power securely for only two decades from 1486 A.D. to 1506 A.D. It comprises only two kings Saluva Narasimha and his son Immadi Narasimha. The problem of the relationship of this dynasty to the first of the Sangama dynasty has not satisfactorily been solved.

The details given by Ferishta and the author of Burhan-i-Ma'asir, the details given in the Jaimini-Bharatam and the Varahapuram and also the descriptions given by the Portuguese chronicler Fernao Nuniz all support the theory of a double usurpation of the Vijayanagara throne, first by the Saluva dynasty and later by Narasa Nayaka the founder of Tuluva dynasty. Though Narasa Nayaka was the de facto ruler, he did not usurp the throne.

The exact dates of the usurpation of the Saluva dynasty should be between 1486 A.D., which is the latest known date of the first dynasty, and 1491 A.D., which is the earliest known reliable date of Immadi Narasimharaya.

The present grant is in the Saka year Ritu 6 Netra (2), Yuga (4) and Indu (1) i.e. Saka 1426 which corresponds to 1504 A.D. This year, it is verified, corresponding to Rudhirodgari. This is a leap year. February 29 of 1504 A.D., was a Thursday, the tithi was Purnamasya and the month Phalguna. It is also verified that on that date there was a lunar eclipse. Hence all the astronomical data given in the grant conclusively prove the date of the grant to be 29-2-1504 A.D. This grant must therefore have been in the last years of the reign of Immadi Narasimha.

It is generally assumed that Narasimha of the Tuluva dynasty was the real wielder of power during the days of Immadi Narasimha. However, the language used in the present grant would suggest that Immadi Narasimha was in full possession of his authority.

The village is on the northern bank of Kshiranadi, or Palaru in Padaividu-maharajya which corresponds to some portions of the North Arcot district. In Walajapet Taluk of North Arcot district, there is a river called Palar. On its northern bank, there is a village by name Kaveripak with a big tank. Near it, there is a village still known as `Changadu`. The present village can easily be identified with it.

There are one or two interesting details about the grant. The grant is inscribed on two copper plates only. The first two plates are missing. The next two plates three and four are serially numbered in the plates themselves. But from a perusal of the matter, it is seen that plate four starts in the middle of a sentence, and does not form a continuous narration from the end of the third plate. In view of this, and in view of the fact that the plate was found somewhere in Mahaboobnagar district which is far away from North Arcot district, one may perhaps hazard a guess, that this plate must be a copy made out of the original grant, by one of the donees who had copied only the important and relevant portions pertaining to him and omitted the other details. If this is so, the seal and the ring would not have been there, and plates 1 and 2, which should have contained prasasti of Narasimhendra would not have also been copied, since they were not quite relevant to the subject matter of the grant.

It would, therefore, appear that only the two copper plates viz., the third and fourth plates would appear to have been copied from the original. Even here, while starting the fourth plate, some other matter, containing perhaps some other names of other donees would have been omitted and hence the fourth plate starts in the middle of a sentence. One of the donees from the present list, or perhaps his immediate successors, must have copied the relevant portion of the details of the grant of the king Immadi Narasimha, and that too only the portion of the list of donees concerning themselves and brought the plates down to their new place as they migrated. It is only this theory that can explain the finding of this grant of a village in North Arcot district, in Mahaboobnagar district, and the fact that plate four starts in the middle of a sentence though plate three ends completely with a sentence. The fact that there are many errors of writing in the grant would also appear to lend support to this view.

The following inscription is on three sides of a pillar now planted in the compound of the local library at Nelakondapalli. It is in Telugu prose and records the grant of land to some shrines in Kondapalli, on the orders of Kondamarusayya, who ruled in this region as governor in the reign of Krsna-deva-raya of Vijayanagara.

The inscription is dated in Saka 1438, Dhatri, Jyeshṭha, suddha, tritiya, Sunday. The date is a sound one and corresponds to Sunday the 4th of May A.D. 1516. The tithi on the previous day (that is, Saturday) was dvitiya, and tritiya did not commence till 98 of that day. The same tithi continued the whole of Sunday and lasted for I ghatika for 30 minutes after sunrise on Monday.

The inscription is important as evidence of Krsna-deva-raya's conquest of this region. The Pillar containing this inscription was actually set up by Parvat-ayyamaru.

Translation

[LI. 1-5] May there be good fortune! Hail! (In the) glorious, auspicious, victorious, and prosperous Saka year 1438, being the present (cyclic) year Dhatr, in (the month of) Jyestha, (on the) third (day of the) bright (fortnight), (on) Sunday, [LI. 5-14] While Krsna-deva-raya was ruling the earth, Rayasam Komdamarusayya made a dharma-sasana for the Gods and others in Komd(d)apalli beyond the (river) Krsna, which he was ruling from Peda-Komda-palli.

[LI. 15-22] Offering I kuccela (of land) in Komd(d)apalli town, and (among) villages, I kuccela in Ramgam, 1 kuccela in Kunamuggu, and I kuccela in Gattipattana was given away as annual remuneration for (providing) meals; and this money (or gold) was made sarva-manyā for all time (to come).

[LI. 22-29] Offering beside the paddy field behind the Pedacervu, we gave as our gift wetland.....and a quarter behind Bolla-samudram, and 1 kuccela of dry land.

[LI. 29-32] So may God enjoy this as long as the Moon and the Sun last.

[LI. 32-35] Thus on the orders of Komd(d)amarusayya, Parvat-ayyam-garu established the (pillar of) inscription.

[LI. 36-43] If the Hindus violate this dharma, they will incur the sin of having killed cows, brahmins and women, in Benares; if the Muslims violate (this) they incur the sin of having eaten the pig.

Note on the Nelakondapalli inscription of Krishna-deva-raya

by

DR. P. Srinivasachar, M.A., Ph.D. (Lond.)

The present inscription states definitely that in the year A.D. 1516 Komdamarusayya, one of the governors of Krsna-deva-raya, was ruling over a part of the modern Telingana of H.E.H. the Nizam's dominions at least as far as Nelakondapalli in the Khammam taluk of the Warangal district. The question arises as to how and when this region came under Vijayanagara rule. Was this region under the rule of the Vijayanagara kings even before the time of Krsna-deva-raya, or did he acquire it by conquest? If the latter is the case, when did he conquer this region and from whom? These are some of the questions that have to be answered in deciding the above problems. As regards the first question it seems pretty certain that this region was not under Vijayanagara rule in the beginning of Krsna-deva-raya's reign, and that he must have conquered it sometime before the date of the above inscription. So it remains for us to investigate the question of the date and the circumstances under which this region was conquered.

We know that by the time of this inscription (i.e., A.D. 1516), Krsna-deva-raya had practically come to the end of his Kalinga campaigns. He had captured Udayagiri, Kondaveedu, and various other places, and had even marched to Simhacalam, as seen from his inscriptions there. If we postulate that part of Telingana including Nelakondapalli was under the Gajapati king it follows that all this region came into Krsna-deva-raya's hands during this Kalinga war. Such a view gains support from the evidence of a contemporary Telugu literary source, called Parijatapaharanam by Nandi Timmayya, which states that the Gajapati kingdom included even Khammamet in the west. If we accept this view it remains to be considered whether the Gajapati kingdom included Nelakondapalli, and if so how far exactly this kingdom extended in this direction.

On the other hand, if we suggest that this region was under Muslim rule at that time, it follows that Krsna-deva-raya led a separate expedition against this region sometime before A.D. 1516. Even this view has some evidence to support it. Raya-vacakamu, an important source of Vijayanagara history, and another work called Krsna-raya-vijayamu state that after capturing Udayagiri, Kandukur, Kondaveedu, Kondapalli, and Vinukonda, Krsna-deva-raya proceeded against Ahmednagar, that is, Ahmedabad-Bidar, and that after reducing that place he hoisted his own standard there and turned once more towards the interior of the territories of the Gajapati king not heeding the cautious advice of his minister, Timmarusu.

Before discussing these two different theories to decide which is correct, let us examine the question of the boundaries between the Gajapati and the Muslim kingdoms, since with this question is linked up the other question as to who ruled in this region at the time of Krsna-deva-raya's conquest.

A definite landmark in our attempt to reconstruct the history of this time is the Warangal inscription of Ambira-deva dated A.D. 1460, which states that the Gajapati forces under Ambira-deva captured Warangal and perhaps drove away the Muslim general in charge of that fort. Humayun Shah was too busy dealing with a serious rebellion at home to recover Warangal at once, and he seems to have died not long after. His successor being just a boy, the king of Orissa was tempted to march upon the Bahmani capital, and even came to a distance of only 40 miles from the Bahmani capital, but was defeated in the encounter that ensued at that place between his own forces and those of the Sultan. The Sultan however could not press home this victory on account of the invasion of Sultan Mahmud Khilji. The invader evidently got the better hand at first, but was forced to retire without gaining any advantage on account of the threat of the Sultan of Gujerat to intervene on behalf of the Bahmani Sultan. Even after this, the Bahmani kingdom was not free from fear from this quarter, and as a matter of fact, scarcely a year later Mahmud Khilji threatened to invade again, and was kept out only on account of the ready intervention of the Sultan of Gujerat. Under such circumstances, very little could be accomplished by way of conquering new territory or regaining lost possessions.

The reign of Muhammad Shah III (A.D. 1463-1482) witnessed the expansion of the Bahmani kingdom farther East, so as to include Kondavidu, Rajahmundry and perhaps all the land between the rivers Krishna and the Godavari as far as the sea. He might have been partly aided in this by a change of ruler on the throne of Orissa in A.D. 1470. But whatever the reason may be, the Bahmani kingdom certainly grew far eastwards, sometime before the building of the 'beautiful domes and colleges in the Bazaar of Bidar' by Mahmud Gawan in A.D. 1471. There were one or two attempts at revolt, which on one occasion in A.D. 1480 necessitated the Sultan's expedition against Kondaveedu. But under the able guidance of Mahmud Gawan the kingdom remained intact as long as he was alive.

The death of Mahmud Gawan was the signal for the commencement of the play of the centripetal forces in the Bahmani kingdom. The eastern region broke off from allegiance to the Bahmani throne soon after Muhammad Shah's death, or even during the last year of his reign:

and almost the first military event of his successor's reign was a campaign against this region 'to make war against the country of Telingana'. Evidently even Warangal was not subordinate to the Sultan, since he is said to have pitched his camp within sight of the fortress of Warangal. But nothing came out of this expedition since the political atmosphere was full of intrigue and treachery, and the campaign ended in the Malik Na'ib fleeing to Bidar to seek the shelter of a faithless friend, and the Sultan following the unfortunate fugitive to his lair, giving up the campaign.

There were no more attempts at Muslim expansion eastwards, until Sultan Quli came on the scene, first as a governor appointed by the Bahamani Sultan and later as the Founder and the first king of the Qutb Shahi dynasty of Golconda. The date of his appointment as a governor is given as A.D. 1487 (A.H. 903) in the Burhan-i-Ma'asir, while Firishta makes it a year earlier. This appointment was made as a reward for his valuable services in the battle-field against Dastur-i-Mumalik. Burban-i-Ma'asir adds that 'he obtained suzerainty over all the feudatory chiefs of Telingana.....and added to his former possessions the town of Warangal and Kovilconda with their dependencies. We do not know how Warangal came to be in the hands of the Sultan, since he had not succeeded in capturing it in his early expedition against it. Perhaps Sultan Quli himself conquered it on a certain occasion when he is stated to have been sent to reduce Telingana. Anyway, Warangal was lost again in A.D. 1504 when it fell into the hands of Shitab Khan, the powerful chieftain of Khammamet.

We know that Sultan Quli recovered not only this region, but extended his kingdom much farther in this direction. The extent of his conquests has been summed up by himself as follows. 'It is now nearly sixty years since I was first engaged in spreading the banners of the faithful, and reducing the infidels of Tulingans from the borders of Warangal to Masulipatam and Rajahmundry, having taken between sixty and seventy forts by force of arms, such as Rajconda, Kovilconda, Dewurconda, Panugal, Gunpoota, Jirconda, Yelgundel, Mulungoor, Etgeer, Meduk, Bhowungeer, Belumconda, Warangole, Cumamett, Indraconda, Ramgeer, Condapilly, Ellore, and Chicacole. But this statement was made at the fag end of his long life, and as such does not help us either to determine the date of his conquests or to find out how far his kingdom extended in the East at the time of Krsna-deva-raya's Eastern and Northern campaigns.

The detailed account of Sultan Quli's campaigns as given by Firishta falls into three groups.

- (1) Firstly, his conquest of Rajakonda, Devarakonda, Pangal, Ghanpura and Koilkonda.
- (2) Secondly, his war with 'Seethapathy (or Shitab Khan), and as a consequence of that war another war with the Gajapati king of Orissa.
- (3) Thirdly, his war with the Vijayanagara king in the region surrounding Kondaveedu, Kondapalli, and Bellamkonda, in which he was ultimately successful and is stated to have exacted tribute from even the king of Vijayanagara.

The third group of conquests obviously refers to the period after the death of Krsna-deva-raya, because we know from unimpeachable inscriptional and other evidence that Krsna-deva-raya did not suffer any defeats in this region, and that he conquered all this region and much more, extending far up into the kingdom of Orissa. The testimony of Krsna-deva-raya's inscriptions in this region makes it impossible to assign this group of Sultan Quli's military exploits to any time before the death of Krsna-deva-raya. Firishta also confirms this view by stating that immediately after this war and as a consequence of it another war followed between Bijapur and Golconda. We know the date of this war since the death of Ismail Adil Shah which took place during this war is commonly assigned to A.D. 1534. We might therefore be not far wrong in assigning these conquests to sometime immediately after the death of Krsna-devaraya.

The earlier achievements of Sultan Quli forming the first group referred to above relate entirely to the country south of the capital, Golconda, comprising the whole region surrounded by the five forts mentioned by Firishta, Rájakonda and Devarakonda in the north and the north-west, Pangal in the south (not the Panugal, 4 miles off from Nalgonda, but another Pangal roughly about 15 miles away from the Krishna river), and Ghanpura and Kovilkonda in the west. By the conquest of this region Sultan Quli extended his kingdom as far as the river Krishna in the south and the south-west, and thus became the immediate neighbour of the Vijayanagara and the Bijapur kingdoms. The date of this campaign may be tentatively fixed on the basis of

- (1) the date of Sultan Quli's relinquishment of active control of affairs in the Bahmani capital about A.D. 1500, and
- (2) the capture of Warangal by Shitib Khan in January A.D. 1504.

The success of Shitab Khan is explicable only on the basis of an assumption that Sultan Quli who was a distinguished soldier could not oppose the action of Shitab Khan, being far away from Warangal, with all his attention engrossed in an active military campaign in the south. When we next hear of Shitab Khan (i.e. after Sultan Quli's expedition against 'Imad Shah) Shitab is stated to be a Raja 'who possessed the strong forts of Cummamett, Belumconda, Wurungole and others', and who 'presumed to lay hands on some of the Kootb Shahi districts, which lay contiguous to his own country'. The passage shows clearly that Warangal had already become recognised as a part of Shitab Khan's kingdom, and that Shitab Khan was advancing even farther west. It was this constant aggressive attitude of Shitab Khan towards Sultan Quli that led to the war which ultimately humbled him.

Sultan Quli's war with Shitab Khan was a protracted and rather formidable affair. Khammamet was an invincible stronghold of Shitab Khan and the acquisition of the strong fort of Warangal gave him a decided advantage over the Qutb Shahi ruler. Sultan Quli therefore wisely chose Bellamkonda for his initial blow. It was not too far away from his own stronghold of Devarakonda, but was in one corner of Shitab Khan's kingdom and was by no means his strongest fort. After considerable difficulty and loss of many men, Sultán Quli captured it and immediately had to face the forces of Shitab Khan, who marched against him on hearing of the fall of Bellamkonda. In the action that followed Sultan Quli was victorious but not before he had lost many brave officers and soldiers from the well-directed fire of the enemy's infantry, which withstood several charges of the Muhammadan cavalry'. This probably discouraged him from pursuing Shitab Khan and besieging Khammamet or Warangal. Sultan Quli plundered the camp of Shitab and returned to Golconda.

The results of this expedition were by no means decisive in character. Sultan Quli gained nothing but plunder and Shitab Khan started concurrent measures for a further attack on Sultan Quli, backed up by a confederacy of a number of petty chieftains. It was probably on this occasion that the Gajapati king hoped to profit by fishing in troubled waters and lent aid to Shitab Khan. War ensued immediately and ended more profitably to the Muslims than on the former occasion. After an initial success in a 'sanguinary action' near Khammamet. Sultan Quli captured Condapilly (i.e. the modern Nelakondapalli), Indraconda and Etgeer, and finally, after a formidable assault, he captured Khammanet itself. Shitab Khan made a last bid for victory with the help of the Gajapati king and several other chieftains, but was again defeated and his partners were captured or slain although he himself escaped alive. Sultan Quli followed up this victory by capturing Kondapalli and Ellore. He even marched on Rajahmundry and inflicted another defeat on the enemy. The Gajapati king grew alarmed and concluded peace with Sultan Quli, agreeing to the stipulation that 'the Godavari should be the boundary between the Mahomedan kingdom of Telangana and the Hindu territory of Orissa' and that the district of Ellore was to be made over to the Muhammadans.

A close scrutiny will reveal the fact that this peace was not so beneficial to the Sultan as might appear at the outset. In the first place the region south of the Krishna continued to be under the Gajapati rule, with its strong forts at Kondaveedu, Vinukonda, and other places. The Gajapati king might even have retained a strip of land adjacent to the coast to ensure his connection with his territory south of the Krishna. The Sultan was given only the district of Ellore, which probably did not extend right up to the sea but only as far as the big lake to the east of that town. Secondly, even assuming that Sultan Quli retained Khammamet and Kondapalli which he had conquered in this war, his enemy Shitib Khan was not finally disposed of. Shitab seems to have retained most of his northern possessions, and continued either as an ally or most probably as a subordinate of the Gajapati king. Even Warangal does not seem to have been wrested from him by Sultan Quli. So for these reasons Sultan Quli's conquests on this occasion were not of a permanent nature, and were probably lost to the Gajapati king when his attention was diverted to other centres of activity and his hold on this region relaxed.

It is not necessary here, to go into the intrigues and other details of the political affairs of the Muslim kingdoms of the Deccan. The two main points to note in this connection are, firstly, that the Bahmani Sultan was alive, and secondly, that Sultan Quli had not yet declared independence. Naturally, Sultan Quli's attention was attracted more to the west than to the east, although in the east the Gajapati king was very anxious to get back what he had lost and to consolidate his position right up to Udayagiri. The Muslim occupation of the district of Ellore—assuming that the occupation did take place as a result treaty—was almost like driving a wedge into the Gajapati kingdom, and the Gajapati king would have lost no time in securing it again, especially since he now had a valuable ally or subordinate in Shitah Khan who seems to have continued ruling the territory north and north-west of this region as seen above.

The actual reconquest by the Gajapati king is proved by the fact that this region was in his Kingdom at the time of Krsna-deva-raya's invasion. Nalagonda (modern Nalgonda), Khammamet, and Khandikonda (an Mabbababad taluk of the Warangal district), are referred to among others, important places in the Gajapati kingdom which Krsna-deva-raya captured. If on the other hand these places were in the hands of the Qutb Shahi ruler, we cannot explain why the defeat of a Muslim ruler is not made such of in Vijayanagara inscriptions and contemporary Telugu literature, and why this region is explicitly referred to as under the rule of the Gajapati king. So it seems extremely probable that the Gajapati king conquered this region sometime before Krsna-deva-raya's Kailnga campaigns, probably, as stated above, when Sultan Quli's attention was diverted to other affairs.

The exact date and the circumstances of this reconquest are not known. It may have some connection with Krsna-deva-raya's defeat of the Golconda army, when the latter (i.e. the Golconda army) crossed the river Krishna and penetrated into Krsna-deva-raya's dominions towards the end of his southern and western campaigns. Rayavācakamu states that the Muslim army was severely defeated, and that a great number of soldiers perished in trying to retreat across the Krishna, then in full floods. The Telugu work, Krsna-raya-vijayamu confirms it. Still another work called Vijayanagara-samrajya also says that in the cyclic year Prajotpatti (i.e.,

A.D. 1511) Krsna-deva-raya fought with the Qutub-Shahi king. We may or may not accept this date, but the fact that there was a short war between Krsna-deva-raya and Sultan Quli before the former's Kalinga campaigns is pretty certain. This event occurred before Krsna-deva-raya's march on Udayagiri and his attack on the Gajapati territory. So it is possible that the Gajapati king, far from cooperating with Sultan Quli and resisting a common danger, availed himself of his neighbour's weakness and quietly took possession of all the eastern territory including the various forts in Telingana referred to above, and which were all later on wrested from him by Krsna-deva-raya. Little did he realise the impending danger in store for himself.

The course of events might not have been quite so unfavourable to the Gajapati king, if Krsna-deva-raya had followed up his success against Golconda by crossing the Krishna, and pursuing the defeated army. The Gajapati king could then have cut off his retreat, and succeeded in ultimately establishing more favourable relations with Vijayanagara in terms of absolute equality. But the wise counsellors of Krsna-deva-raya foresaw the danger in such a course of action and dissuaded him from such a hazardous venture. Krsna-dēva-raya resisted the foolish temptation, and started on his famous Kalinga campaigns. His early conquest in this region was Udayagiri, but before long he had proceeded much farther and secured practically the whole of the eastern territory between the rivers Krishna and the Godavari. He annexed it to his kingdom and appointed governors, one of whom was Rayasamu Kondamarusayya, who was stationed at Kondapalli and issued the order registered in the present record from Nelakondapalli.

It is therefore possible to conclude from the above that this region was in the hands of the Gajapati king at the time of the campaign of Krsna-deva-raya into this region, and that Krsna-deva-raya conquered it along with the rest of the Gajapati territory sometime after the capture of Kondaveedu (which took place early in A.D. 1515), but before the date of the present record.

This inscription dated in the reign of Krishnadeva Maharaja of Vijayanagara, describes the endowments made by Rayasam Kondamarusayya to the Gods of Kondapalli, while he was residing at Yadava Kondapalli, on the other bank of river Krishna. The gold, (Rajyavorikam paindi) that was collected formerly in the town of Kondapalli and the villages dependent upon it, for Ranga, Kunamuggu, and goddi dipa, and for feeding (bona) as Sarvamanya. He granted in addition to the paddy field behind the big tank that was already in cultivation, 1/4 wetland, and one kuchela or dry land as his personal gift. The inscription was set up by Parvatayya under orders of Kondamarusayya.

This date S. 1438, Dhatu, Jyeshtha Su. 3, corresponds to Sunday, 4th May, A.D. 1516.

 Reign of : Vira-Krishnaraya.
 Inscription date : 16th January, 1521 A.D.
 Language : Kannada.

This inscription refers to the Vijayanagara king Vira-Krishnaraya and cites the date Saka 1443, Vrisha, Ashadha s`u. 12. This corresponds to A.D. 1521, January 16, the week-day being Sunday, not mentioned in the record.

The epigraph records the endowment of two villages, Chennunipadi and Velampadu, to the god Brahmesvara of Alampur by Gauradanayamkara Narayana of Harita gotra for the religious merit of the king. The gift was made at the instance of Gauradanayamkara Basavapayya who was invested with the authority of Ambaradanayanaka over Alampur-sime by Vira-Krishnaraya after the letter's subjugation of Rachuru as a result of his successful military campaign in the north.

The god Brahmesvara also called Bala-Brahmesvara, is described in this record as having manifested himself in the excellent Alampur. This statement establishes the identity of Hatampura in other records with Alampur. This place is mentioned as Dakshina Varanasi and Kasi-kshetra on the bank of the Tungabhadra.

Allusion to the subjugation of Raichur by Krishnadevaraya in this record is interesting.

These inscriptions are from Yoga Narasimha temple inscribed on slabs, dated S. 1443 Vrsha, Ashada su. 12 (16th June A.D. 1521). These inscriptions belonged to the reign of the Vijayanagara king Krishnadevaraya. They record certain gifts made by Gaure-dannayaka Narayanayya at the instance of Gaure-dannayaka Basapayya who is stated to have received Alampura-sime as amara-danayamka from the king when the latter captured the fort of Rachura (i.e. Raichur).

Remarks

Records a gift of the villages Chennunipada and Velapalu for the worship and offerings to god Brahmedvara at Alampura and for feeding 12 Brahmanas, by Gaura-danayaka Narayanayya of Asvalayana-sutra, Rik-sakha and Haritasa-gotra, at the instance of Gaura-danayaka Basvapaya who received Alampara-sime sa amaradanayamka from the king when the latter captured the fort of Rachura.

Another one records a gift of the village Bayarapura alias Narasimhapura and some lands in Alampura to the god Yogananda Narasimhadeva of Alapuri by Gaure-dannayaka Narayanayya at the instance of Gaure-dannayaka Basvapayya. The latter is stated to have received the Alampura-sime as amara-danayamka from the king who captured the fort of Rachura.

This inscription on stone in Kannada refers to the reign of the Vijayanagara king Vira Krishnaraya and cites the date Saka 1443, Vrisha, Ashadha s'u. 12. This corresponds to A.D. 1521, June 16, the week-day being Sunday not mentioned in the record. The epigraph contains some spelling mistakes.

The charter registers the endowment of the village Bayarapura made to the god Yogananda Narasimha of Alapuru by Gauradanayaka of Harita gotra, Asvalayana sutra and Rik sakhi, at the instance of Gauradanayaka Basavapayya, for the spiritual prosperity of the king and religious merit of Gaurava Danayanka.

The income derived from the endowed village was to be utilised for the conduct of daily worship, offerings and ceremonial rituals of the god Narasimha, as well as for the fortnightly, monthly and other periodical festivals including the car festival in honour of the deity.

After its endowment the village was renamed Narasimhapura. As the income from the village was found inadequate to meet the cost of the above transactions, it was supplemented by the grant of additional land of the sowing capacity of eight khandugas from the land belonging to the village of Alampur.

The god Narasimha, it is stated, was enshrined on the bank of the river Tungabhadra, constituting the Southern Varanasi near Alampur which was the western gateway of Srisaila, called Bhaskara Kshetra, situated in the region of the rivers Krishnaveni, Vedavati, Nadavati and Tungabhadra. The names Alapuru and Alampur figuring in the above account are, obviously, variants of Alampur.

Gaurava Danayanka for whose merit the grant was made, was obviously the same as Gauradanayaka Basavapayya. This dignitary had been conferred the authority of Amara Danayanka over the Alampur region by Vira Krishnaraya after his victory of Raichuru, i.e., Raichur, gained as a result of his successful military expedition in the north.

This record furnishes the earliest epigraphical allusion to the famous battle of Raichur which took place in May A.D. 1520. Another inscription dated one month later in July, A.D. 1521, shows that Raichur was actually in the possession of Vijayanagara. See Further Sources of Vijayanagara History, Vol. I, Pages 211-12.

This inscription on stone in Kannada refers to the reign of the Vijayanagara king Vara Krishnaraya and cites the date Saka 1443, Vrisha Ashadha s'u. 12. This corresponds to A.D. 1521, June 16, the week-day being Sunday, not mentioned in the record. The epigraph contains some spelling mistakes.

The charter registers the endowment of two villages Chennunipada and Velambodu to the god Bila Brahmasvara by Gaura Danayanka Narayanayya of Harita gotra, Asvalayana sutra and Rik sakha at the instance of Gaura Danayanka Basavapayya for the spiritual prosperity of the king and religious merit of Gaura Danayanka. The god Bala Brahmesvara is described as the sole lord of the universe who had made himself supremely manifest in the eminent town of Alampur.

The income accruing from the first village was to be utilised for the conduct of daily worship, offerings and ceremonial rituals of the god, as well as for the fortnightly, monthly and other periodical festivals including the car festival in honour of the deity. The income from the second village was to be utilised for the maintenance of a Brahmana performing ablutions to the deity, for astronomical service, and for running a free feeding house for feeding twelve Brahmanas every day.

The god Bala Brahmesvara, it is stated, was enshrined on the bank of the river Tungabhadra at Alampur, the Southern Varasi and the Western gateway of Sri Parvata, and Kasi-kshetra situated in the region of Krishnaveni, Vedavati, Nadavati and Tungabhadra.

Gaura Danayanka for whose merit the grant was made, was obviously the same as Gaura Danayanka Basavapayya. Language : Persian and Naskh.

This inscription on a Dargah of Nizamud-Din, slab in the southern wall from Kodangal in the Mahbubnagar District, states how the two villages called Awlin the big and Awlin the small were merged into one and named Husainabad which was endowed for running the langar of the twelve imams. The record constitutes a will executed by Malik Qutbu-l-Mulk, the progenitor of the Qutb Shahi rulers of Golconda in A.H. 919 (1513-14 A.D.). It is worth noting that the inscription, in as much as it does not mention Qutb Ul-Mulk with any royal title, is additional epigraphical evidence against Firishta's statement that Qutb Ul-Mulk assumed kingship in A.H. 918 (1512-13 A.D.).

Remarks

Registers a document executed in favour of the langar dedicated to 12 imams by the king who ordered that the two villages, viz., Buzurg and Kuchak, should be merged into one qasba to be named Husainabad and its income should be spent on the maintenance of the said langar. Inscription on the Jami `Masjid

by

G. Yazdani

This is the earliest inscription in the fort, and is fixed over the doorway of the jami masjid which was built by sultan quli, the founder of the Qutub Shahi dynasty, in 924 A.H (1518 A.D), when he was only a governor of the fort under the Bahmani king Mahraud shah. The mosque contains a large hall which is divided into four aisles, and five arched openings. This inscription is in Arabic, and is carved on a tablet of black basalt measuring 2'10" X 1'3". The style of writing is Tughra of an exceedingly fine type and the letters are well preserved.

This new record of the time of Masnad-i-`Ali Ulugh A'zam Malik Qutbu'l-Mulk, found at Rajupeta, records the construction of a tank at Yampur, in dedication to the memory of Twelve Imams, in A.H. 930 (A.D. 1523-24) by Baba Khan, a retainer of Malik Qiwamu'l-Mulk, out of his personal money. Of the produce grown with the help of the tank, one share was to be given to the Diwan, two for the uplift of the public and one for the builder which he assigned for the Langar (Free-kitchen) of the Twelve Imams. The yearly income derived from that much land obtained on free-hold lease by the builder in which 5 kuro seed could be sown was to be spent on the repairs of the bridge.

This inscription is on a slab over the tank band. States that the tank of the village Yampur was constructed during the time of the chief (who is spoken of as his lordship Masnad-i- 'All Ulugh A'zam Malik Qugbu`l-Mulk) by Baba Khan, a retainer of the greatest of the Maliks, Malik Qiwamu'l-Mulk. Further states that the builder had sought assistance from the masters and obtained guarantee (qaul) that of the crop grown in the neighbourhood of the tank, one share will be given to the state (Diwan), two were to be used for the public welfare, and one for the builder who had taken pains and spent his personal money over the construction. The builder also dedicated his share to the langar (i.e. free-kitchen) of the Twelve Imams. Also states that he obtained on free-hold lease that much land below the tank in which 5 kure seeds could be sown with the intention that the produce therefrom would be utilised for the repairs of the bridge. Ends with an imprecation against those seeking to violate the above provise.

This inscription is on a slab set up on the tank bund. States that, while the Mandaladhipati, Masnad Yeli Kutabanamaluka Odeyalu was ruling the kingdom, his son-in-law Kemana Maluka was governing Nalgonda pertaining to the throne of Eruva, Babaja, the latter's servant submitted to his master, that he was desirous of constructing a new tank at Empuru; that for this the share of the government should always be 1; Kampus(farmers) should have 3; and that out of these 3 he should have one share of the tank for having constructed it with his own money: and the Kampus 2 and that in addition he should be given 5 tumus of fertile rice field behind the tank as Inam. As Kemana Maluka agreed to the proposal, Babaja constructed the tank. After completing the work he assigned the produce of tank's one share to a free-feeding house; and the produce of Inam field every year for repairing the tank bund.

Inscription of Malik Qutbul-Mulk

by

N.M. Ganam

The epigraph is incised on the entire face of the pillar measuring 130 by 44 cm. The text consists of thirty lines of writing executed in Naskh, of which the first three and a half are in Arabic. A Persian quatrain (Ruba`i) is inscribed diagonally in four lines at the bottom. In between is the historical text. Telugu words Shri Kavi are found super scribed in the beginning. On another pillar at the same tank-bund is inscribed the Telugu Epigraph, the gist of which will be described later.

The Perso-Arabic epigraph records the construction of a tank in the village Yampur in A.H. 935 (1529 A.D.) during the time of his highness Mansab-i-Ma`ali Ulugh A`zam Malik Qutbu`l-Mulk by Baba Khan, a retainer of his excellency, the greatest of the Malik`s, Malik Qiwamu`l-Mulk. It further states that the builder had sought assistance from his fellow-officers and got issued a fresh guarantee (Qaul) to the effect that of the crop grown in the neighbourhood of the tank to be divided into four shares would go to the state (Diwan), two would be for the general public and the fourth one would accrue to the builder who had taken pains in the matter and spent personal money over it. This on share of his, the builder dedicated, the further declares, to the Langar (Free-Kitchen) of the Twelve Imams. The epigraph also states that the builder has obtained free lease of that much land below the tank in which five *Kuro*¹ seeds could be shown, with the avowed intention that the produce there from would be utilised for the repairs of the bridge i.e. the tank-bund. The epigraph ends with a request to the future possessors or managers of the tank to abide by and observe the terms of the agreement and invoke prayers for the mercy of God and His Prophet on them and their descendants to the seventh degree. The benediction is followed by imprecatory phrases inviting God's curse, etc. on the defaulters. It also invokes prayers soliciting God's forgiveness for his sins and acceptance of his devotion on one, who like the striver, carries out the terms of the endowment.

The gist of the Telugu record is as follows:-

“It states that a certain Babaja, the servant of Keman-maluka who was the son-in-law of Masandayeli Kutubana-maluka-vodaya and who was ruling from Nallagonda, the capital of

Eruva (country) got a tank excavated in accordance with the following stipulations as permitted by Kamana-malaka:

To the king (divanam): 1 share
To the Kampus: 3 shares

However, since Babaja spent his own money also for excavating the tank, 1 share was given to him while the Kapus' share were reduced to two.

Of the land which is irrigated by the water of this tank yendum (i.e. 5 tumers) of paddy land (vadlapolam) is converted into Inam. The annual produce of this field is to be utilised for maintaining the tank-bund. The share of the tank (i.e. probably the share of Babaji) is granted by him (i.e. Babaja) for maintaining a Choultry (anna-sattram)”.

This extremely interesting record is important in more one respect: First it is one of the few records so far known of Malik Qutbu`l-Mulk, the founder of the Qutb Shahi dynasty of Golkonda. Like his other epigraphs known for, it does not invest him with regal titles, providing one more evidences for the fact, conclusively proved by the late-lamented Professor Harun Khan Sherwani, that Malik Qutbu`l-Mulk did not formally declare his kingship or assume royal titles even through he ruled Quite-independently, but contented himself with the titles conferred upon him by his master Sultan Muhmud Bahmani.

Secondly, the inscription has preserved the name of a nobleman namely Qiwamu`l-Mulk. We know two persons bearing the names Qiwamu`l-Mulk; one Qiwamu`l-Mulk senior and the other Qiwamu`l-Mulk Junior. Both were Bahmani officials who palyed important roles during the reign of Shamsu`d-din Muhammad III (1463-1482) and Shihabu`d-Din Muhmud Shah (1482-1518). Qiwamu`l-Mulk Senior was killed in the factional wars between the Afaqis (foreign Immigrants) and the Dakhanls (natives) which took place at the capital soon after the accession of Sultan in 1482 A.D. Qiwamu`l-Mulk Junior had his fief in Rajahmundry. He had resisted from the beginning Sultan Quli`s clam over the eastern Telangana and had even extended his activities by laying waste the northern parts of Telangana, Qutbu`l-Mulk thereupon marched against him and defeated him. Qiwamu`l-Mulk fled to Berar, where he took refuge with `Alau`d-Din `Imadu`l Mulk. This was in 1504. We do not hear anything about him thereafter.

None of these two is identified with Malik Qiwamu`i-Mulk of our record which is dated A.H. 935 (1529.A.D.) and which speaks of him in such glowing terms as his Excellency, the Lord, and the greatest of the nobles. In all probability, therefore, our Qiwamu`l-Mulk is a different person.

But the Telugu counterpart of this epigraph which was set up in Saka 1451 Virodhi, Vaisakh ba. 3 Monday (1529 A.D). April, a gist of which has been given above, furnishes an additional piece of information, namely that Qiwamu`l-Mulk was the son-in-law of Masnad-I-Ali Qutbu`l-Mulk and was stationed at Nalgonda. This is quite interesting information. The epigraph is thus an important document in the sense that it has preserved the name of a Qutb Shahi official not otherwise known and also furnishes information about his relationship with the progenitor of Qutb Shahi dynasty. It is rather surprising that though he was closely related to Qutbu`l-Malik, he does not find mention in historical works of the period. That he held a high post at the Qutb Shahi court and held fief in the Nalgonda region is evident.

As regards Baba Khan, the builder of the tank, he is not traceable from available records. The epigraph refers to him as an employee of Qiwamu`l-Mulk, which means that he was an official appointed by Qiwamu`l-Mulk and was connected with the local administration.

The epigraph also furnishes an interesting piece of information that the ancient name of Rajupeta was Yampur. The epigraphical tablet is in Situ and therefore it is clear that the village Yampur where the tank was constructed and which is now known as Rajupeta was originally known by the name Yampur.

The record under study also throws light on the irrigational facilities available in those days. Not less interesting is the pattern of distribution of the proceeds of the land cultivated through this irrigation. The produce was equally shared by the ryot on one hand and the state and the builder on the other. The ryot claimed half produce and the remaining half was equally shared by the government and the builder. The Telugu version specifies this division of shares. It states that the proceeds are allowed to be divided between the government and the subjects in the proportion of one to three respectively; but since Baba Khan, the builder of the tank, had spent his own money for excavating the tank, one share was given to him consequent upon which, the share of the subjects was reduced to two. The builder on his part dedicated his own share, the income of which he used for the benefit of the public by establishing charitable institutions like free-kitchen (Langer) or Choultry (anna-satram) of the Telugu version. He had also provided the regular upkeep and repair of the tank-band, by obtaining lease, some land below the tank and endowing the income from it for the purpose. The term `Puḷ` used in the Persian text means `bridge` but here it is obviously used for the `tank-bund` as in the Telugu version.

The Telugu inscription, a copy of which was sent for decipherment by Mr.G. Yazdani, the Government Epigraphist for Moslem inscriptions, may also be noticed in passing, although a comparatively late document. It belongs apparently to the reign of Ibrahim Qutun Shah, the son and successor of Jamshid Qutb Shah of Golconda, and is dated in Tuesday, the fifteenth day of the bright half of Magha of the Saka year 1472 (11th February, 1541 A.D.). While recording that the damaged bund of a large reservoir of water called Udayasamudram was repaired by one Rahmat-Ullah for the merit of Sayyidu-s-Sadat, Sayyid Shah Mir, the honoured counsellor (of the king), it clearly states that the shares (of income) according from the lands irrigated by the reservoir were divided in such a way that one share went to the king, one and half to the subjects, and two to the Turukalu (Turushkas), i.e., Mahomedans, as well as to Brahmans, and it thus gives an idea as to how revenues were distributed in those days in the tract to which the document belongs.

The Director of Archeology, Hyderabad State, Deccan, sent for decipherment a Telugu inscription on a small pillar in front of the fort gate at Koilkunda, District Mahbubnagar. The record is engraved on three faces of the pillar and consists of 104 lines. It records that when Ibrahim Qutb Shah of Golconda was residing at Vijayanagara, the garrison of the fort of Koilkunda swore the Prince an oath of allegiance. One point of interest about the inscription is its date which works out as equivalent to January, 1551 A.D. The date of the accession of Ibrahim Qutb Shah as given by Firishta as well as by the author of the Tarikh-i Qutb Shahi is, however, 1550 A.D. It would appear, therefore, that either the date of the accession of the king has to be corrected, or that the garrison commemorated the day of their allegiance after the king's accession.

Inscription of Ibrahim Qutb Shah from the Pangal Tank, Nalgonda District.

by

G. Yazdani

Pangal is now a small village, some two miles to the N. E. of Nalgonda, but historically it is mentioned as possessing a fort which during the reign of Ibrahim Qutb Shah (1580-90 A.D.) was temporarily attached to the kingdom of the Vijayanagara ruler, Ramraj. Pangal may still boast of its temples, the grace and beauty of which place them among the finest specimens of Medieval Deccan architecture. To the North-East of the temple is a pleasing expanse of water, styled the Udayasamudram. It has a massive dyke, running to a length of nearly a mile, and having several sluices². The dyke seems to have been repaired at various times and a black stone inscriptional tablet is fixed to this day, which records that repairs were executed to the band as early as 958 H. (1551 A.D.) during the reign of Ibrahim Qutb Shah.

The inscription is bilingual, in Persian and Telugu, and it mentions the name of Sayyid Shah Mir, whose real name was Sayyad Shah Taqi, and who rose to the position of the chief Commander of the Qutb Shahi forces during King Ibrahim's reign.

Another interesting fact mentioned in the inscription is that the proceeds of the lands irrigated by the army was as much as that of the king and the tenants combined.

The style of the writing is Naskh and the Persian version consists of 14 lines. The entire tablet measures 6 ft. by 1 ft. 9 in. and the extraordinary feature of its carving is that although it is a Moslem record it has a sun and a moon carved at its top, which are emblematic of the hindu faith.

The Telugu version has been kindly deciphered and translated by Mr. Lakshmi Narayana Rao of the Epigraphic Survey, Government of India, through the kind offices of Dr. Hirananda Sastri, Government Epigraphist.

During the reign of Abul Muzaffar Sultan Qutb Shah (Ibrahim), on the 14th of Ramadan 958 H. (15th September, 1551 A.D.) His Honour (lit. His Refuge), the wielder of authority, Sayyid Shah Mir Isfahani, son of Sayyad Ahmad Tababai (may he be blessed !) rebuilt the embankment of the Pangal tank, which had fallen out of repair through age, and spent money (on this work) from recompense in the next life. Inscription on the Makki Darwazah

By

G. Yazdani

This inscription is engraved on the façade of the Makki darwazah (so called on account of its facing the city of Mecca). The Darwazah is a massive structure, and consists of two gateways and an extensive court with guard rooms between them. The gates are made of teakwood studded with iron wrought in fanciful devices, and huge sharp pointed iron knobs which were intended to prevent elephants battering them in.

The language of the inscription is Arabic containing phrases from the Qura`n and other Islamic books, a practice in which the Muslim writers indulge to give dignity to their writings. The inscription is written in beautiful Tughra style and exhibits an art in which vigour and elegance have been skilfully combined. The size of the letters is unusually large and the inscription measures 46'2" X 1'6 1/2".

Translation

In the name of god, who made the world of his mercy an impregnable fort, the gates of which have been open to us through (His) mercy, therein shall be safe; and blessings be upon Mustafa, in whose person the forts and defences (lit., paths, defiles, etc.) of prophecy have been completed (i.e. the last and the most perfect of the prophets), and he is the town of learning and 'Ali is the gate of the town; and up on his friends the custodians of the qualities of the truth and integrity. After that, this gate of fortune, and fort of felicity was verily, built during the days of the administration of the greatest of sovereigns, and the noblest of kings who is the refuge of water and clay (i.e. sea and land), the opener of the gates of benevolence to all creatures, the elevator of the edifice of the law prescribed by the chief of Apostles, the builder of state and religion, the shadow of god in the world, the namesake of the friend of god (Prophet Abraham), Humayun-i-A'zam Qutub Shah- may the forts of his sovereignty ever remain safe from the earthquake (of misfortune) and the towers of his kingdom from the clefts of change and alteration! –by the noble efforts of the pillar of his powerful empire, and the prop of his bright kingdom, the collector of books and the disperser of armies, whose qualities and pedigree are referred to the manifestation of wonders in mankind ('Ali) known among the people as Kamalu-d-din Husain and entitled Mustafa Khan on account of his high rank, may God accept his efforts mitigate his misfortune! A number of epitaphs belonging to men of different stations in life were copied at Golconda, Hyderabad. Of these, the most important are those, found at Golconda, of the sons of the celebrated Qutb Shahi prime-minister and king's deputy Amir Kamalu'd-Din Husain Ardastani, entitled Mustafa Khan, one records the demise of Mirza 'AH who died in A.H. 966 (A.D. 1559) and the other of Shan 'Abdu'l-Qasim, who expired in A.H. 971 (A.D. 1564). Other epigraphs, also from the same place, record the demise and mark the graves of Sayyid Abu Talib Astarabadi (d. A.H. 996=A.D. 1587-88), Amir Sayyid Husain Mustafa Khan (d. circa sixteenth century A.D.) and Mir Yahya. Some new epigraphs have been found in a mosque situated close to the Jallad Burj in the Naya Qala at Golconda. It is a small but beautiful structure and has a dish-shaped vaulted roof. The Mosque, according to an inscription carved on it, was constructed by Mulla Khiyali, who was one of the court poets of Ibrahim Qutb Shah.

Over the arch of the entrance of the mosque is fixed a tablet which bears the following inscription in Thulth characters.

Plate XVII (a)

Translation

“Verily the places of worship are set apart unto God, wherefore invoke not any other together with God: Whatever God has said is true”.

Thanks be unto God that during the reign of the king who is the defender of faith and is like a pole star to the world, that is king Ibrahim of good nature.

The spandrels of the arch were at one time decorated beautifully by mosaic work, but the stones which were inlaid have been taken out in recent times. An inscription is also curved in the spandrils in Tughra style.

Plate XVII (b)

Translation

The prophet, whom may God bless, has said:

“The Muslim attains his highest glory when he is praying”.

This auspicious mosque has been constructed by Mulla Khiyali: it will become if the maidens of paradise bring stones and bricks (for the construction of the mosque).

A pillar of paradise for its founder in reference to that chonogram of the mosque is “the pillar of paradise” 977 H. (1569 A.D.).

The interior of the mosque shows traces of floral designs in gold and blue and also bears an inscription in the mihrab.

Plate XVII (c)

Translation

Qur'an, chap. 9, verses 18-19.

The name Muhammad at the end is that of the scribe who flourished during the reign of Ibrahim Qutb Shah, and several inscriptions at Golconda fort testify to his skill in the art of calligraphy. The inscription on the Makki Darwaza is perhaps the best specimen of his skill and this record shows that he came to the deccan from Isfahan. Another inscription carved on the Ashrafi Masjid at Golconda shows that he was the son of Sayyad Sadurud-Din.

In the repairs recently done to the Musa Burj the missing portion of the persian inscription refers to the first siege of Golconda by Prince Muhammad, son of Aurangzeb, in 1656 A.D. has been found.

It was also found to contain the additional information that all the lands from the embankment of (the river) Mushi in Induparal (Yindupukela of the Telugu version) to the bank of the Krishna river (irrigated) by the canals, tanks and ponds are subject to dastband (levy) revertible to qasba Pangal and (from the revenue cess of the lands irrigated) by the dam the Muslims and the king and Hindus would have some share.

Inscriptions of the Qutb Shahi Kings

by

M.F. Khan

On the gateways a ruined mosque at Gazinagar, now a petty village of no importance in Devarakonda Taluk in the Nalgonda District. Both the epigraphs purport that the mosque, designated in one of them as Bait-i-Ibrahim Qutub Shahi (lit. house of Ibrahim Qutub Shah), was constructed in 1576-77. But in neither record the name of the builder of the mosque is quoted.

The first of the two is carved on a slab measuring 1.47 m. by 33 cm. fixed over the eastern-gateway. Its text comprises the first Creed, as modified by Shias and a tradition of the prophet, inscribed in the middle panel 6 lines, and 2 verses engraved in 2 lines each in the side panels, which record that the mosque, built through the will of God, was named the house of Ibrahim Qutub Shah and that it was A.H. 984 (1576-77), when the construction took place. The date is given in words. The style of writing is Naskh of no particular merit.

Translation

- (a)(1) This wall populated mosque was built by the divine will.
 (2) It was designated Bait-i-Ibrahim Qutb Shahi.
- (b)(1) There is no god but Allah, Muhammad is
 (2) The prophet of Allah, 'Ali is the friend of Allah.
 (3) said the prophet, on him be Allah's blessings and
 (4) peace, 'He who talks of worldly affairs
 (5-6) in the mosque, Allah renders all the good deeds he may have done at Mecca for seventy years'.
- (c)(1) It (i.e. the date) was eighty four above nine hundred (A.H. 984=1576-77 A.D.)
 (2) Remember this, O sensible person with the car of sense !

The second inscription appears about the southern gate of the same mosque and also contains a tradition of the Prophet, different from above but commonly found in mosque epigraphs, and the date in figure, in the middle panel and one verse in each of the side panels. The style of writing of the Arabic text is Thulth and that of the Persian, Nasta`liq. It will be observed that the Calligraphy of this epigraph is much superior to that of the preceding one.

The tablet measures 1-36 m. by 30 cm.

Translation

- (a)(1) There is no god but Allah, Muhammad is the prophet of Allah (and)
 (2) 'Ali is the friend of Allah, for certain. 'and verily,
 (3) The mosques are for Allah (only); hence Invoke not anyone else with Allah.'
 (4) Year (A.H.) 984 (1576- 77 A.D.)
- (b)(1) May this threshold remain always open, by the grace of God and through the blessing of (the Creed) 'I bear witness that there is no god but Allah' !
 (2) He who enters this mosque, through sincerity of heart, whatever he wishes, gets from God.

The name of the builder is not quoted in the above records. But from the shiite First Creed, quoted in both the epigraphs, he appears to have professed the Shi'a Creed.

Qutb Shahi Inscriptions from Golconda

by

Dr. Z.A. Desai and S.S. Hussain

The tablet bearing the first inscription was buried under the boundary wall of the stepwell called Imliwali-Baori situated at the edge of the Nagina-Bagh in Golconda fort. This tablet is now laying in the office of the Conservation Assistant, Golconda fort.

Unfortunately, on examination, this epigraphical tablet proved to be half its original size; also, the original tablet appears to have been semicircular in shape. A search was made for the missing half, but it could not be traced. Apparently, it was used as masonry at some place in the fort-wall or elsewhere or might have even fallen in the stepwell where it was found.

The extant text occupies a space of about 76 by 50 cm. and purpose to record the construction of a mosque by one of his merely referred to as Mirza-i-Buzurg, during the reign of the king of the Religion and the state, Qutb Shah (by whom, in view of the date, evidently Ibrahim Qutb Shah is meant) in the year A.H. 970 A.D and odd. The exact year cannot be determined, as the word indicating the unit of the year was inscribed on the portion of the slab that is missing, but fortunately, the words nine hundred and seventy occur on the surviving tablet, which would place the construction between A.H. 970 (1562-63 A.D.) and A.H. 979 (1571-72 A.D.), when Ibrahim was reigning. It is not certain if Mirza-i-Buzurg is used as the proper name of the builder or just as an honorific- meaning the great Mirza – to express his dignity and high-ranking personality. Now if it was used in the latter sense, that is to say to qualify the builder as the great Mirza, the name of the Mirza should have occurred in the text on the missing other half of the tablet. But from the syntax of the second verse, it is missing that the second hemistich does not seem to contain the name (of the Mirza) but appears to have been devoted to say something about `the mosque`. In the circumstances, it is futile to speculate about or try to identify the builder.

The text which is in Persian verse, originally seems to have consisted of a Fragment of three verses, of which only the first half of each verse- the first hemistich and a word or so of the second hemistich of each verse, to be exact-has survived. The missing portion, fortunately, does not amount too much, as far as the purport is concerned, except of course the part of the date.

The quality of the verse is fairly good. Naskh's writing style is also fairly good.

Translation

- (1) In the time of the king of the religion and the state, Qutb shah, who.....
- (2) Mirza-i-Buzurg (lit. the Great Mirza) built, just for the sake of obtaining proximity (to god), a mosque, which.....
- (3) If you desire its date of the construction, know (that by now) had passed Nine Hundred and Seventy through purity.....(from the Migration of the Prophet).

As stated above, the mosque was constructed some time in or after A.H. 970 (1562-63 A.D.) but before A.H. 980 (1572-73 A.D.) i.e. between A.H. 979 (1562 and 1572 A.D.).

Unlike in the case of the builder, the exact location of the mosque referred to in the text may perhaps be determined with some amount of certainty. The possibility that it was situated in the fort itself, somewhere in the vicinity of the Nagina-Bagh and the afore-mentioned step-well (where the slab was presumably used for masonry work in the past by illiterate labourers for constructing the boundary wall of the step-well) is reasonably strong. According to Shri Hussain, there is at the edge of the said step-well, abutting to its north-eastern side, on the western periphery of the Nagina-Bagh a large raised plinth (forming a court) with steps and a portion of the western wall with three arches and prayer-niches (mihirabs), of which, half or slightly more than half has fallen in the step-well. This, in all probability, was the mosque referred to in the epigraph.

The inscription would add one more mosque to the three mosques generally associated with Ibrahim Qutb Shah's reign, this one being the second, if the above presumption is correct, in the Golconda fort premises itself. The other mosques are: A small pretty mosque with two graceful minars half-way up the Bala Hisar in the Golconda Fort and Mustafa Khan's mosque and Mulla Khayali's Mosque, within in the annexe to the Golconda fort called Naya Qal'a or 'New Fort'.

This inscription incidentally raises a very important question: the ascription of the first (Bala-Hisar) mosque situated half-way up the Bala Hisar has been recently doubted if not challenged by. Dr. Z.A. Desai, director (Epigraphy), Archaeological Survey of India, Nagpur, on stylistic grounds; he is inclined to consider it as a later building, probably of Abdu'llah Qutb Shah's time. Against this, it has been, however, suggested that if this view were to be accepted, the question would arise whether, Golconda being the permanent residence of Ibrahim, there were no mosques on the way to Bala Hisar which answered to the religious needs of the king and his countries. The answer to this poser is perhaps provided by the inscription under study and the ruins of the mosque which is being identified as its original place. Situated as it is at the start of the Bala Hisar steps adjoining the step-well in a corner of Nagina-Bagh, this now desolate and ruined mosque with facilities of water, garden, etc., was best suited to serve the purpose of a prayer house for the courtiers, officials, soldiers, visitors and the like.

by

G. Yazdani

Patancheru is taluqa town in the Medak district of his highness Nizam's Dominions. It is situated on the Hyderabad-Bidar road, some twenty miles to the north of the former. In the 10th century A.D. Patancheru was an important centre of Jaina religion and the Archaeological Department, Hyderabad, has found there by excavation a large number of Jaina sculptures of considerable beauty and iconological importance. These images are now exhibited in the Sculpture Gallery of Hyderabad State Museum. At Patancheru there are also two domes, one of which bears an inscription on its southern gate.

The inscription records the building of a lofty vault by one Abdul-Qadir, entitled Amin Khan, during the reign of Sultan Ibrahim Qutb Shah. The inscription also refers to an inam land and to the Mosque with prayer-hall and enclosure, both apparently attached to the vault.

The inscription is curved on an arch-shaped slab, measuring 5 ft. 3 inches at the base and 4 ft.6 inches in height. The style of writing is Thulth of an intricate type and the language is Persian.

Translation

“And my guidance is from no one but from God, the High and Powerful”.

The building of this heavenly vault and the foundation of this lofty edifice (happened) during the reign of his highness exalted majesty, the world, the possessor of imperial dignity and divine authority, the shadow of God, the servant of the family of the apostle of God (Muhammad), the sultan the auspicious, the great, Ibrahim Qutb Shah may god preserve his kingdom and sovereignty and extended to the people of the world his benevolence, justice and bounty !

And by the grace of god, Almighty, and by the help of the triumphant soul of his holiness of the prince of saints, the chief of divines and god-loving persons, the axis of the earth and heaven, the most admired of the beautiful, and the chief of the beloved Shah Muhiud-Din Abu Muhammad Sayyid Abdul-Qadir al-Hasani al-Jilani, may god be pleased with him, the humble and lovely (servent), called Abdul-Qasir, and entitled as Amin Khan, Quraishi al-Qadiri, the disciple of his grace, the pivot of mankind, Shah Muhammad al-Qadiri al-Multani, the successor of his Grace, the leader of mankind, Shaikh Ibrahim, alias Makhdum Shaji, Muhammad Qadiri, may god sanctify the secrets of both of them, after having exerted himself to the full, completed and finished (this building) in the year 976 H. (1556 A.D.) from the hijra of the chosen prophet (Muhammad), may the peace of god and his most perfect blessings be upon him !

It is earnestly hoped and sincerely believed that God, the holy and almighty, whose glory is respectable whose bounty is universal and whose authority is sublime, will keep this lofty vault under his protection and care against the vicissitudes of time -though his bounty benevolence and kindness. Amen ! O Cherisher of the universe. By the grace of Almighty God, by the help of the spiritual devotion of his holiness the prince of saints (Shaikh Muhiud-Din Abdul-Qadir), may god be pleased with him, and by his (Shaikh Abdul-Qadir) inscription in the in'am land of the above mentioned vault a mosque with prayer-hall and an enclosure round the same mosque were also built of solid masonry. The latter building was completed in the month of Jumada I, Shahur san 984, of the hijra of the chosen prophet-may peace be upon him! (September, 1583 A.D.). This inscription set up by the humble, lowly and insignificant servant, Abdul-Qadir, entitled Amin Khan and known as Shaikh Miyan, son of Shaikh Bare, son of Shaikh Humayun, son of Qazi Khvajan, son of the pride of scholars, Qazi Amjad, son of the chief of the holy men, Qazi Qutb Baba, al Qarshi, al-Qadiri was corrected by the noble descendants of the latter (i.e., progeny of the forebears of Aadbdul-Qadir), whose names are, Khattat Khan, Fazil Khan, Abdul-Ali, Abdul-Karim and Shaik Ibrahim.

Inscription in the Jami Masjid, Hyderabad City.

by

G. Yazdani

The mosque is one of the earliest buildings erected by Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah (1580-1612) to adorn his newly founded capital, Hyderabad, or Bhagnagar, as it was originally styled. Firistha mentions it along with the Char Minar and writes - "Mahomed Koolly Kootb Shah built an elegant masjid in the middle of the city".

The building has two inscriptions, one carved in three lines on a slab of black basalt (7' X 2') fixed over the entrance door of the mosque and another engraved along the sides (each 13' X 1'5") and top (8'7" X 1'5") of the prayer niche. The former is Persian verse and written in beautiful Taliq characters. The name of the king is omitted in the inscription but the name of his master Aminu-l-Mulk, under whose superintendence the mosque was built, is mentioned. Aminu-l-Mulk held the distinguished office of Mir Jumla immediately before the famous Sayyid Mir Muhammad Amin of Astraba, who is better known in history by his official designation then by his real name. Amin-l-Mulk was an accomplished general and he distinguished himself in quelling the rebellious of petty Hindu Rajas which took place in the middle of Muhammad Qutb Shah's reign.

The name of the calligrapher is Baba Khan who seems to have been a Persian artist.

Translation

- (1) The lord of the world, the king of kings; in whose reign the virtuous received generous treatment.
- (2) The heart is consoled, the soul is refreshed when his (lips) make a speech.
- (3) His courteous manners have made this earth the envy of Paradise, and his (beautiful) face shows the rose garden of Iram.
- (4) By his own exalted order he built a mosque, below the roof of which heaven revolves like a ball.
- (5) (Paradise In the hope that) perchance it may be seen in the courtyard of the mosque, flits in and out continuously.
- (6) I am proud of this because the pre-eminence of Islam (over other religious) is well proved.
- (7) Should any one ask the date of its say, "How excellent is this lofty beneficent building".

Completed by the efforts of Malik Aminu-l-Mulk.

Written by Baba Khan.

The inscription in the prayer niche consists of an extract from the Quran, the name of the calligrapher, Jalalu-d-din Muhammad, son of Jamalu-d-din Husain, of Shiraz and the date 1006 A.H. (1597 A.D.). The interesting point about this inscription is carved in the prayer-niche of the Great Mosque in the Golconda Tombs. The present epigraph is dated 1006 A.H. it is seventy-one years earlier than its rival in the mosque of the Golconda Tombs, which is dated 1077 A.H. and is evidently a copy of the former inscription. In India calligraphers have never refrained from copying the writing of earlier master-artists and in some cases they have copied their name as well to pass off the work of their masters as their own.

Translation

Written by a servant, Jalaiu-d-din Muhammad Al-Fakhkhar, son of Jamalu-d-din Husain, of Shiraz, in the year 1006 A.H. (1597 A.D.).

Translation

The lord of the world and king of kings.
 In whose reign the good man saw that which was good.
 He who gives ease to hearts, and at the same time rends souls in twain.
 When his ruby lips open in speech.
 Who has made this earth the envy of Paradise.
 By displaying in it his own face, the rose garden of Paradise.
 By his own exalted order built a mosque under the roof of which one world say that the heavens revolved.
 Before it's courtyard, one would say,
 That the king invited all to accept Islam.
 Should any ask the date of its foundation,
 Reply "Behold the lofty and beneficent building".

It was completed by the effort of Malik Amin-ul-Mulk, written by Baba Khan.
 The chronogram gives the date A.H.1006 (=A.D. 1597-98).

This inscription is one of the most important records of the time of Muhammad Quli Qutub Shah. It occurs on the side of a bastion towards east, of the Bala-Hisar fort of Medak, a taluk headquarters in the district of same name in Telangana. Situated in 18°26'E., this once strongly fortified town formed part of the ancient kingdom of the Raja of Warangal. In 1309, Malik Kafur, the famous general of Alaud-Din Khilji, marched with a large army against the Raja and took Medak. In the second half of the 14th century, it was part of the Bahmani dominion, and subsequently passed on to the Qutub Shahi dynasty in the time of Jamshid Qutb Shah in 1545.

This huge epigraphical tablet, measuring 2.10 m. by 35 cm., contains only one line of text, comprising, what is evidently intended to be, two Persian verses, which do not appear to bring any credit to the composer. The style of writing, likewise, is Thulth of no particular merit, except that it is remarkable for its boldness. The epigraph records that the bastion of Medak was completed in the month of Rabi I 1011 (August-September 1602), during the reign of Muhammad Quli Qutub Shah and that it was constructed by Ahmed.

Translation

Ahmad constructed, in the month of Rabi ul Awwal, during the days of Sultan Muhammad Quli Qutub Shah.

(In the year of) the Migration of (The Prophet) Muhammad, peace and salvation be on him, one thousand, six and five years, the bastion of Medhak was completed (Rabi ul-Awwal 1011= August-September 1602).

We have no information about Ahmed, the builder of the bastion of Medak, whose name even would have remained in oblivion but of this record, but there is a strong possibility that he was an official. The epigraph thus provides an important piece of information about the history of the construction of the Medak fort.

This inscription of the article is an unpublished record of Mohammed Quli Qutub Shah. Its tablet, which is unfortunately fragmentary, was found lying loose in the Khazana building at Golkonda, and on examination by Dr. Z. A. Desai in the course of a visit to the fort, was found to contain a Farman of Mohammed Quli Qutub Shah, recording the grant of 30 bigahas of land to a saintly family. It only quotes the dynasty-name Qutb Ul-Mulk for the king.

The epigraphical tablet, measuring 30 by 32 cm., contains a record of six lines in Persian, executed in Nasta'liq characters of a fairly high order; it will be seen that the upper part of the slab is inscribed with a three-pronged figure, which may stand for the hand-impression found on certain categories of Royal letters.

Translation

- (1) since a piece of land, in accordance with
- (2) the order (Farman) of Muhammad Quli Qutb Ul Mulk,
- (3) measuring thirty bighas, (was allotted) in the name of the asylum of chiefship (i.e. Sayyad),
- (4) Hasan Ali Arab, son of Miran (?) Sayyid Yusuf
- (5) Makhdum Jahaniya, of pious actions
- (6) bounded, whosoever obstruction (the aforesaid person), will run the risk of divorce.

I am not in a position to say anything about the persons mentioned in the record. The text, being unfortunately incomplete, does not contain the usual details recording the village or town where the land was situated, the family background of the grantee, the purpose of the land grant, etc.

Inscription on the tomb of Bibi Khadija in Mir Ka Daira. Mir Ka Daira is a large necropolis in the city of Hyderabad, containing hundreds of dressed stone graves. The principal tomb there, on account of which the necropolis seems to have been established, is the shrine of Mir Momin of Astrabad. He was a minister to Muhammad Qutb Shah, and his memory is held sacred to this day among the shittes on account of his piety, learning and intuitive knowledge.

The tomb of Bibi Khadija is a small structure consisting of a square hall crowned with a heavy dome. The grave is built at the centre of the hall and is profusely decorated with religious text. The style of writing exhibited on the grave is highly artistic and a specimen is reproduced.

A good number of inscriptions have been copied/photographed from different parts of Hyderabad, Of these, the earliest one is a brief chronogram based Persian record in Nastaliq characters, copied from a local tomb, that reads: Ya Makhfi al-Husaini Bandu Nawaz, yielding the date AH 1035 (A.D. 1625-26), obviously for the death of the saint Sayyid Shah Makhfi al-Husaini Chishti alias Khwaja Salar, a descendant of Sayyid Muhammad Husaini Geso Daraz. The saint flourished during the reign of Sultan Muhammad Qutb Shah (A.D 1612-26). Sayyid Murad Ali Tali also in his work Tadhkira-i-Auliya-Hyderabad, correctly mentions the date of death as A.H 1035. But Maulavi Abu Turab Muhammad Abdul Jabbar Sufi Malkapuri, in his voluminous work Mahbub-i-Dhil Minan Tadhkira-i-Auliya-i-Dakan (ii. p. 835) wrongly gives his date of death as A.H 1140.

This inscription is in the Toli Masjid. The mosque has two inscriptions. One of them is carved on two tablets of black basalt, each measuring 3'2" X 1'3". The tablets are laying loose in the courtyard of the mosque near a grave with which they apparently have no connections, for the inscription carved on the tablets records the erection of a mosque in 1043 A.H. during the reign of Abdullah Qutb Shah. This mosque is different from the Toli Masjid, which, according to the inscription set up in its prayer niche, was built by Musa Khan in 1082 A.H.

This inscription on the two basalt tablets is in Persian verse, the metre being Ramal. The style of writing is Nastaliq.

Shaikpet is a small village to the north-east of Golconda Tombs. It has a mosque which at one time was decorated with beautiful tile-work. The mosque is built on a platform, and its plan consists of a prayer-hall and a court with a cistern for ablutions in the middle. The prayer hall measures 37 ft. 6 in. and has three arched openings towards the east. The inscription is carved on the western wall, being arranged in six panels, four of which contain Persian verse, one contains Quranic text and another the name of the calligraphist, who was a Persian. This calligraphist name also occurs in the Toli Masjid inscription of Hyderabad which was built by Mussa Khan, during the reign of Abdulah Qutb shah. As the present inscription also contains the name of sultan Abdullah, it appears that the artist Lutfulla enjoyed royal patronage during the reign of this king.

The Persian verse of this inscription is written in the Nastaliq characters while the Quranic text is in Thulth script. Both styles of writing are of high order and show that Lutfulla was a calligraphist of extraordinary ability. The total length of the inscription on the wall is 15 ft. 3 in., while the width of the panels on which it is carved is 1 ft. 6 in.

This inscription is on Muhiyud-Daula Mosque, locally called Husaini Masjid. This inscription is one pertaining to the reign of Abdullah Qutb shah. Its tablet is fixed over the main entrance of the Muhiyud-Daula mosque, locally called Husaini Masjid, which is architecturally an insignificant building, situated in the Kucha-i-Nasim in Machhli Kaman at Hyderabad.

Attention to the presence of two interesting inscriptions, each, on this mosque as well as another one stated in the neighbourhood, as will be mentioned shortly, was first drawn by late Sayyid Ali Asghar Bilgrami in his book on the archaeological remains of Hyderabad city and suburbs entitled Landmarks of the Deccan, published in 1927. But unfortunately, he did not notice the inscriptions of both the mosques in full or in detail. Moreover, his reading, probably noted from memory, was not accurate either. Nevertheless, to him goes the credit of discovering these records.

The Husaini Masjid, which is otherwise a small mosque of no architectural merit, has its central mihrab built wholly of black basalt. It bears two inscriptions: one is above the main entrance of the mosque and other on the three sides of the rectangular frame enclosing the said niche. Bilgrami who was only quoted the concluding portion, which is historical, of the second of these two inscriptions, has misread the date as A.H. 1046 instead of A.H. 1045.

The tablet fixed over the main entrance measures 1.20 m. by 43 cm. and is inscribed with a four-line text which begins with a quranic verse and ends with a tradition of the prophet and also contains a persian fragment of five couplets. The writing is signed and dated by the calligrapher. viz. Mir Ali, son of Mir Ali Jan Mashhadi. While there is nothing very particular about the poetry of these verses, though it is certainly better than that of a good many such epigraphs, its style of writing is decidedly of a very good order. As a matter of fact, it was in regard to the calligraphic aspect of the order inscription on this very mosque that Bilgrami had occasion to point out that record. The style is a fine specimen of Naskh which should determine the position of its master, Mir Ali, among the calligraphists of first rank.

The epigraph states that in the reign of the just king Abdullah Qutb Shah, Haji Husaini constructed the mosque, through Divine guidance, in A.H.1045 (1635 A.D.). The text, which was written on 22nd Rabi I of the said year (26th August, 1635).

Translation

(1) 'And verily, the mosques are for Allah ; hence invoke not anyone else with Allah'. During the reign of the most Fortunate and the successful king, Qutb (i.e. the pole-star) among the Shah's (i.e. monarchs), the refugee of the people, the shadow of God, 'Abdu'llah, that Sky of of generosity,

(2) The king who puts Jamshid on the throne, a just sovereign and a delightful Daraius, Haji Husaini who by divine guidance in, (the year) five and forty of migration after one thousand, laid this

(3) foundation of the bountiful and Soul-nourishing mosque, in the hope that God may, at the time of reckoning (on the day of judgement), bestow on him a house in Paradise, because this saying has been quoted of (the Prophet) Ahmad, (Viz.)

(4) 'He who builds a mosque for Allah, Allah builds for him a house in Paradise'. Written by the humble creature, Mir Ali son of Mir Ali Jan Mashhadi, (on the) 22nd of the month of Rubi ul-Awwal, 1045 (26th August 1635).

It is not possible to establish the identity of the calligrapher, but according to Mr. Bilgrami, it was also this Mir Ali who designed the Quranic inscription occurring on the Rahim Khan's mosque, in Hyderabad which was built in A.H.1053 (1643-44 A.D.). Though, in the absence of an illustration it is difficult either to accept or reject this identification, the time factor is in its favour. But Mr. Bilgrami is definitely wrong to state that Mir Ali was a contemporary of Mir Aliul-Katib and Mir Ali Tabrizi. Mir Aliul-Katib, who is, incidentally, identical with Mir Ali Tabrizi, flourished more than two centuries earlier. Even Mir 'Ali Hirawi had died in A.H. 924.

The other epigraph of the Husani-Masjid, is carved in one line along with the three sides of the rectangular frame of the central Mihrab. The top side has one additional line above, containing a famous tradition of the Prophet about offering prayers and repentance before it is too late. The major part of the text is taken up by the shiite durud and it is towards the end that the historical portion occurs. This comprises what I take to be a hemistich in Arabic, containing the name of the builder, followed by the name of the Scribe Mir Ali and the date.

Mr. Bilgrami has thus confused the words of the text. From the reading quoted below, it will be observed that the text mentions Mir Ali as the scribe independently. It gives the name of Haji Husaini along with the mosque, of which he was the builder. The correct reading of the Date is likewise, A.H. 1045 and not 1046.

The text occupies a writing space of 1.88 m. by 16 cm. each on the right and left sides, and 90 by 18 and 70 by 15 cm. on the top side of the prayer-niche. It provides, particularly in the portion containing the shiite durud, an excellent specimen of Thuluth writing while, the part containing the names of the builder and the scribe is inscribed in Naskh which is not so exquisite.

Translation

(a) Hasten with prayer before its expiry (and) hasten with repentance before death (overtakes).

(b-d) Shiite durud in full

Verily, the mosque is auspicious, and (so be) Haji Husaini.

Written by the humble creature, Mir Ali, in (A.H.) 1045 (1635 A.D.).

Rubbings of three Arabic inscriptions, bearing religious texts and executed in beautiful Thulth characters, were received from the Deputy Superintending Epigraphist, Zonal Office, Madras of the Survey. Of them, one inscription records the date A.H. 1060 (A.D. 1650), evidently that of completion of the mosque on which it appears along with the name of the scribe Muhammad Salih Mazandrani who had been a famous calligrapher under Abdullah Qutb Shah (AD 1626-72) of Golconda. These records provide pleasant calligraphical specimens.

No solder like Ali, no sword like *Zul faqar*⁵
 Unto God.

Inscription on the Musa Burj

The history of the erection of the bastion is recorded in the inscription No.1 given below. The bastion is semicircular in shape, and consists of three stories, built of solid granite firmly cemented together and sometimes bound with iron clamps. Many of the blocks weigh considerably over a ton. The height of the lowest story from the bottom of the moat is about sixty feet. On the bastion there are some old guns, one of them, the construction of the gun is of the ordinary type, being made of laminated bars welded together and clasped with iron hoops. But the surface polish and the ornamentation are exquisite and cannot easily be surpassed by modern guns.

Inscription No. 1

The tablet on which the inscription is engraved is now fixed on the back of the wall forming the western wing of the modern steps leading to the first story of the bastion. It does not seem to be in its original position, and was apparently placed here when new steps were constructed. The tablet is of a close-grained greenish stone (hornblende), broken near the top. It measures 3'9 ½" X 1'4 ½" in its present condition. The inscription contains twenty-one lines and is written in Naskh characters of clear plain type. The language is Persian.

The epigraph is of considerable historical importance as giving an account from the Qutb Shahi point of view of the siege of Golconda by Prince Muhammad; son of Aurangzeb, in 1066 A.H. (1656 A.D.), and of the peace which was subsequently concluded. Khafi Khan relates that the Qutb Shahi army was reduced to great straits and hence `Abdulla Qutbu-I- Mulk opened negotiations for peace, and promised to pay the arrears of tribute for the past years with a suitable present in cash, jewellery and elephants as the cost of the war, and gave his own daughter in marriage to the prince as a guarantee of loyalty to the imperial court in future. The inscription states that a shot from the guns of the fort hit Mir-I-Miran whose full name was Asadullah Khan Bukhari, and he expired on the spot. Three days after his death peace was concluded. Khafi Khan describes a violent fight between the imperialists and the garrison on the death of Mir-I-Miran, and it is not unlikely that the loss of this important officer, who held the rank of Bakhshi and during the attack was commanding the Mughal forces, might have expedited the termination of the war. The erection of a new bastion at the place where the imperialists had concentrated their offensive, as recorded in the inscription, however, clearly indicates that they had detected the weak points of the fortification and that, but for the peace, they would have made a breach therein.

Besides mir-i-miran another historical personage mentioned in the inscription is musa khan. Khafi khan designates him musa khan mahalldar (keeper of the palace); but in the siege he is shown to play the role of a general. The inscription designates him both a minister and a commander-in-chief. In the old town of Hyderabad, along the road which goes from the purana pul to Golconda, there is a most beautiful mosque (called the Toli Masjid), which was built by musa khan in 1032 A.H. (1671 A.D.).

The inscription has also a counterpart in Telugu which rao sahib H Krishna sastri has kindly deciphered and translated. It is engraved on a black basalt tablet which is broken in three pieces, now built in the southern wall of the bastion steps. The total length of the three pieces is 5'7" and width 1'5".

There upon the exalted khan with all caution baffled the enemy day and night. And by the divine decree a gun-shot struck the body of mir-i-miran in such a manner that he expired in that very intrenchment (whence he was bombing the fort). Three days after his death peace was concluded. When the siege had been raised the supreme orders were issued to the above-mentioned khan (musa khan) that a large bastion be built at this place, so that the enemy might not get an opportunity to dig intrenchments and mines (on this side). In obedience to the auspicious (and) exalted orders, through the efforts of the aforesaid khan this large bastion (was built) within a short time, and completed in the year 1077 A.H. (1666 A.D.). And the architect's name – Dharmschar.

Inscription No. 2.

Near the steps of the bastion, to the north of it, there is fixed in the open an inscribed slab of black basalt measuring 2`8" X 2`6". The inscription records the building of some shops, a well and a garden by Khairat Khan, a grandee of the court of Abdullah Qutb Shah. The inscription contains five lines and is written in Nasta`liq characters. The language is Persian.

⁶ Line 28 is very fragmentary. The translation is therefore not given.

Inscription No. 3.

The inscription is curved on the gun of which we have spoken above. The chief interest of the inscription is the mention of the name of the gun which shows that it was one the name of the four famous guns which were levelled against the fort of Golconda by Aurangzeb during the second Mughal siege, 1687. The gun is of considerable dimensions and measures 14'10" in length, the diameter near the bore being 2'4", while at the end the circumference is 9'.

The gun was also used during the siege of Golconda by Aurangzeb and its name is included in the list given in the Ma`athir-i-Alamgiri (p.290). In workmanship and dimensions, it is similar to its rival on the Musa Burj and was manufactured by the same maker, Muhammad `Ali `Arab. It is now laying on a bastion built in the western wall of the fort, and popularly styled the Petla Burj (the Fat Belly Bastion) on account of its body protruding from the line of fortification. The verses have been engraved round the bore of the gun in a rather humorous sense, comparing the fire-ejecting propensities of it with the sparkling wit and dazzling beauty of the mistress.

Inscription on the Ambar Khana

Half way up in the ascent to the citadel Barahdari are the ruins of a hall and some chambers, called the Amber Khana or storehouse. In front of the building a stone slab of black basalt (2'9" X 1'11") containing an inscription has been fixed in a slanting position, its original place apparently being over the entrance of the hall. The inscription consists of five lines and is written in Nasta`liq characters. The language is Persian.

Inscription in the Hira Masjid

The mosque stands in an extensive quadrangle and is enclosed by a high wall in thickness of which cells for the residence of travellers and students are built. In front of the mosque there is a platform with a cistern in the middle for the ablutions of the congregation. The prayer hall itself is of moderate dimensions and has three arched openings and is flanked with two beautiful minarets. The building has several inscriptions; the principal one is engraved on nine wooden panels, sets of three panels being fixed below the eaves at the apex of each opening. Each of these panels measures 3'2" X 1'6½". The inscription consists of four lines of Persian verse, the metre being Hazaj Musaddas Akhrab Maqbuḥ Mahzūf. The style of writing is Nasta`liq and the model of the inscription was designed by a calligraphist from Shiraz, named Isma`il.

In the prayer niche verse 18 from chapter IX of the Qura`n is inscribed. The style of writing is Tughra of a very beautiful type and the name of the calligraphist, Muhammad Taqiu-d-din, is given at the end of the Qura`nic verse. The inscription is carved on the panel of black basalt measuring 15' X 1'4”.

Inscription on the southern wall of the Nau Mahla

The inscription is carved on a slab measuring 2`10" X 1`, fixed on the outer wall of the Nau Mahla facing the shrine of Gunde Sahib. It consists of one line only and apparently belonged to a shrine which at the erection of the Nau Mahla, during the reigns of the early Epigraph of the Asaf Jahi dynasty, was incorporated in it. The text is a chronogram, the numerical value of which gives the year 1170 A.H. (1756 A.D.), the death of a saint. The style of writing is Naskh.

This inscription is from a Mosque called Qutb Shahi-Masjid which is situated near the Gandi-Baoli line in the Irani Gali, in Hyderabad. it was also first mentioned by Mr. Bilgrami, according to him, ‘the excellence of its calligraphy, justifies its placing on record’ as in the case of the other mosque, there are two epigraphs here both on the central Mihrab, but Mr. Bilgrami had noticed only one. The larger of the two inscriptions is engraved on the three sides of the rectangular frame of the mihrab', and the other, occupying less space, is inscribed on the architecture above the same mihrab.

The former consists of shiite durud in a slightly abridge from then in the previous epigraph and a line in persian purporting that the builder of the mosque which was completed in the reign of 'Abdu'llah Qutb Shah, was Saliha, wife of Bare Sahib and daughter of Dargah Quli. It was written in A.H. 1069 (1658 A.D.) by Muhammad Ali.

This inscription also furnishes a fine specimen of calligraphic style in mural records. The script is Thulth of a high order. The text occupies a writing space of 1.75 m. by 16cm. on the right and left sides of the prayer-niche.

Translation

(a-c) Shiite durud. The builder of the mosque (is) Saliha, wife of Bare Sahib (and) daughter of Dargah Quli. It was completed during the reign of Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah. Written by Muhammad Ali, (in the) year (A.H.) 1069 (1658 A.D.).

The other inscription on the mosque is inscribed in Naskh of no particular merit, on the architectivive above the central mihrab. Running into one line of Persian prose, this important record registers the grant of some property as endowment for the maintenance of the mosque. It states that the income from the garden of the mosque was to be used for the stipends of the mu'adhdhin (caller-to-prayer) and farrash (sweeper) and for the prayer-carpet, oil for lamp, and repairs of the reservoir. It ends with an imprecation against anyone seeking to interfere with the bequest. No trace of the garden, mentioned in the text, which must have originally enclosed the mosque, remains today. As a matter of fact, the land around is taken up by residential houses.

The text, which occupies a writing space of 45 by 7 cm.

Translation

The income accruing from the mosque has been endowed for meeting the expenditure in respect of the salaries of the caller-to-prayer and the sweeper, prayer-mats, oil for lamp, and (repairs of) the cistern of water for ablution. Whoever disobeys or interferes, the curse of God will be upon him !

In Hyderabad City, the piazza in front of the old Qutb Shahi places had four lofty arches facing the cardinal points. The arches still exist and one of them facing the east is called the Fish Arch. Fish was one of the emblems of royalty during the Qutb Shahi period, and a large bamboo and paper fish is still hung from the apex of this arch as an old royalty sign on festive occasions. In the vicinity of this arch there is a tomb with an inscription tablet bearing the Shiite durud and the date 9th Shawwal, 1075 H. (Saturday, 15th April, 1665 A.D.). The inscription does not mention the name of the person who was buried in the grave. The style of writing is Naksh.

The mandate obeyed by the world, commencing in munificence, and the order issuing like the rays of the sun, originating in mercy, had the honour of promulgation from the august court, filled with imperial dignity, to this effect that the Muqaddams, Kulkarnis and the people of the village of Mangalwaram in the division of Janwal, popularly known as Hasanabad, being expectant of the royal favours, should know that we, of our royal generosity, which provides for the condition of all our devoted subjects, have, from the beginning of the year 1074 A.H. set apart the revenues of the village as an endowment for the alms-house, the lights, the reciters of the Quran and the servants of the tomb of Necknam Khan, whose sins are forgiven and whose adobe is in Paradise, in order that his Holiness the lord of the age - may the blessings of God be upon him ! It is necessary, therefore, that officers, agents, Despanians (accountants of the parganas), Thalkarms (accountants of the divisions), Muqaddams (head man) and Kulkarni's (accountants of the village) of the above mentioned division should regard the said village as assigned and apportioned for the expenses of the alms-house, the lights, the servants and the reciters of the Quran attached to the tomb of the aforesaid person, the servants and the reciters of the Quran attached to the tomb of the aforesaid person, whose sins are forgiven, and should not raise any objection to the continuance. And in this matter they should observe great care and strict diligence. And if anybody disobeys the contents of the Farmsan, irresistible as fate, he shall be overtaken by the curse of God and the imprecation of the prophet of God. But he who shall change it, after he hath heard it, survey the sin thereof shall be on those who change it, for God is he who heareth and knoweth. Written on the 12th of Jumada II, 1084 A.H. Qutb Shahi Inscriptions

by

Dr. Z.A. Desai and S.S. Hussain

Translation

The inscription belongs to the reign of the last Qutb Shahi ruler Abu`l-Hasan. The inscription occurs in the central prayer-niche (mihrab) of the mosque called Saraiwali-Musjid in Shaikhpet, a village situated at a distance of about four kilometres to the north-east of the Golconda Fort. The mosque, which is in very good shape, lies on the western outskirts of the village along with two other monuments of sufficient historical and architectural interest, viz., a Tomb and a Caravanserai.

The text of the epigraph, furnishes an extremely interesting record in more than one aspect: firstly, it is one of the very few extant records so far known of Abu`l-Hasan Qutub Shah; like the Gosha-Mahal record, it does not mention him by name, but it refers to the reign of a king at a date given in figure as well as words, which falls in his reign. Secondly it contains an epitaph-cum-mosque-record; thirdly, it records the name of the calligrapher who inscribed it.

The text is in Persian verse and Arabic prose cut in relief in horizontal panels, numbering seven, which are fixed in the sides of the said mihrab above the inner arch-apex level. The first two panels contain a hemistich each in Persian making one couplet. The next three panels have religious text in Arabic, the middle of which quotes the famous Quranic verse (Qur`an, Chapter LXXII, verse 18) occurring in mosque-inscriptions and the remaining two reproduce the famous tradition of the prophet exhorting his followers to hasten to offer prayers before their prescribed time is over and to do repentance before they are overtaken by death. The last two i.e. the sixth and the seventh panels, again, contain another Persian couplet in the same meter and rhyme as the one in the first two panels, appearing to make between them a Fragment, the seventh panel, in addition, containing the name of the scribe and the date both in words and figures. The couplet contained in the first two panels states that `our cypress has received a call from the Unseen (so) that it treads instantly or all of a sudden, the path of God`, while that in the last two states that `a mosque was built the name of God in the time of an auspicious-faced monarch`.

In any case there is no doubt about the mosque having been built in or before A.H. 1089 (1678-79 A.D.), in the time of the reigning monarch Abu`l-Hassan.

The last panel, in addition, contains the date, given in figure as well as words in Persian, which is evidently of writing and presumably also of the construction of a mosque. It also contains the name of the calligrapher, namely Hassan`Ali; by this, very probably Hassan (son of) `Ali is meant. The style of writing is a fairly good specimen of Naksh writing.

The epigraph occupies a total writing space of 3.85 metres by 23 cm.

Translation

From the unseen, a voice beckoned my cypress, so that he (or she) suddenly (or instantly) took to the path of God.

‘Hasten to (say your) prayers lest ye miss them (lit. before their expiry-time)’.

‘And verily, the mosques are for Allah only; hence, invoke not anyone else with Allah’.

‘And hasten to (do) repentance before death overtakes you’.

In the reign of the world-master of auspicious countenance, and (he) built a mosque in the name of the god. Written by Hassan (son of ?)

Ali. Year A.H. 1089, one thousand (and) eighty (and) nine (A.H. 1089=1678-79 A.D.).

The text no doubt does not mention the name of the ruling king but refers to his reign as stated above. This may be an inadvertent omission. Even in the Gosha-Mahal Inscription, his name is absent, as pointed out above. But there is little doubt that the king referred to is none but Abul Hasan Qutb Shah properly known as Tana Shah who succeeded his father-in-law Abdullah Qutb Shah in A.H.1083 (1672 A.D.) and truly until his deposition and arrested by the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb 15 years later.

Likewise, the text is not at all clear as to the name, leave alone the identity of the builder of the mosque. As it is, the Persian metrical text gives two-fold information the death of an unidentified person and the construction of the mosque; it is also not possible to determine from its wording if the deceased and the builder of the mosque are one and the same person, through it would appear that these two are separate persons. In any case, the absence of any names in this particular poetical text is disappointing if not intriguing.

Also, it is not clear as to who composed the potential fragment. the lack of this information of course would not have mattered much- authors of a large number of metrical inscriptions are unknown - but for the fact that the author of this record calls the deceased ‘our prayers’ which why either be taken to mean his beloved one- a wife, a son or a daughter, a young relative of either sex and the like and hence the information about him would have helped in establishing the identity of the deceased as well.

Fortunately, the text gives at least the name of the calligrapher, which has been taken by us to be Hassan (son of) Ali. It can be seen that the two-word name has been split up, the parts having been written above and below the Arabic phrase Katabahu means ‘written by’. This could be taken as Ali Hasan - a single name; Ali (son of) Hassan ; Hassan Ali - a single name; or Hasan (son of) Ali, as there is no indication in the text as inscribed in this portion for correct determination of the name. While Ali Hassan seems to be out of question, Hasan Ali or Hasan (son of) Ali seems to be intended. In any case, the person named is not traceable and cannot be identified. He appears to have been a professional penman, the only extant specimen of whose calligraphy is preserved in this epigraph. The calligraphy is not of such a higher order as to suggest his association with the royal court or the royal library at Golconda, where a number of calligraphers are known to have been employed. He appears to have been one of the artists in different fields who along with men of letters had made the Qutb Shahi capital a cultural seat. In short, the epigraph is of considerable value in that it furnishes one more name in the list of calligraphers of the time of the Qutb Shahis.

Two inscriptions of the reign of Sultan Abdul Hasan Qutb Shah found in the tomb of Miyan Mishk in Hyderabad City. Miyan Mishk was a secretary of king Abul Hasan, holding charge of the royal key and also the high office of the Commander of the Cranatic troops. The inscriptions in Miya Mishk's tomb are copies of two farmans of king Abul Hasan giving the details of the revenue apportioned for the maintenance of the tomb. The chief interest of the inscriptions, however, lies in their styles of writing. One of them is a fine specimen in the script called Shikasta. Which although evolved from Nasta'liq characters through the vagaries of the calligraphers' fancy assumed the most subtle forms and in some cases became absolutely illegible. This style however, on account of its freedom from the conventional rules, has been the popular script of India from the 16th Century onwards, and although its use, owing to the difficulty of reading it, has been given up recently, yet some of the old schools still favour it.

The other inscription of Miyan Mishk's tomb represents a style of writing called Thulth, derived from the Naskh characters and having a tendency towards ornamentation. A fine specimen of this class of writing is reproduced in E.I.M (Epigraphia Indo-Moslamica) for 1915-16 (P1. VII).

Records the copy of a royal order (Farman) of the king, issued to the 'present and future' officials (Amilan) of the village (Mauda`) of 'Attapur in the district (Havli) of Fort Muhammadanagar. States that Malik Mishk has conveyed his request to the royal court that as he has made a legal endowment of his entire free-hold (in'am) land, situated in the said village, purchased by him through legal document (Qabala-i-Shar`i) with a tank, a well and (fruit-bearing) trees, with the stipulation that whatever (income) accrues (from the said land) is spent, after defraying the necessary expenses on the free-kitchen (Langur) set up as an offering (Nadhr) to the Twelve Imams (situated near) the mosque and the stream (Narva), to feed the poor and the deserving with cooked food, a royal order be issued to the officials (Ami lan) of the said village (for its proper implementation). Accordingly, the officials present and past concerned officials of the village are instructed to see that the terms of the endowment (Waqf) as laid down by the Malik are observed. Ends with an imprecation that the defaulter will incur the curse of God and the Prophet.

Two Qutb Shahi Inscriptions from Hyderabad

by

G. Yazdani

The Qutb Shahi Kings professed the Shiite faith and their library and patronage of knowledge and art attracted divines, philosophers, poets and calligraphists in large numbers from Persia. The quarter, Mughulpuras, situated to the South-East of the Char Minar, along the Aliabad Gateway, was occupied by the Persians, whose descendants still reside there, and on whose dwellings and tombs some inscriptions may be seen to this day. The two inscriptions, studied in this paper are Mughalpura ; one of them is carved over the lintel of a mosque associated with the name of a Qutb Shahi lady, Sajidah Khanam, and the other is engraved over the entrance of a well, built by Sultan Quli, son of Farhad, in 1093 H. (1682 A.D.).

Taking the mosque inscription first, it may be observed that its calligraphy is of a very high order, the letters being carved in the Tughra style, exhibiting both skill in penmanship and artistic taste in the general design of the inscription. The inscriptional tablet measures 5 ft. 4 in. by 1 ft. 7 in. and the inscription is arranged into three lines of an interwoven pattern. The name of the calligraphist, Muhammad bin Shiraz, occurs at the end of the inscription, and as another epigraph designed by the same artist is carved on the Jami Masjid, Hyderabad, which is as imperial building, there remains no doubt that the artist enjoyed the patronage of the Qutb Shahi Kings.

The language of the inscription is Arabic and it mentions the name of Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah, who ruled from 1580-1612 A.D. and also the name of a grandee, Dilir Khan, whose sobriquet Filsawar, ‘Elephant-Rider’, shows that the noble possessed except skill in controlling that animal.

Translation

“This auspicious mosque was built by the exalted (officer) Dilir Khan, the Elephant-rider, during the reign of the most benevolent Sultan, the greatest sovereign, Abul Muzaffar Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah : may God perpetuate his kingdom and may his boat float in the ocean of the fulfilment of desires ! written by Muhammad son of Husain, Al-Fakhkhar of Shiraz, in 1008 H. (1597-1600 A.D.)”.

The well, bearing the second inscription, is situated along the Aliabad Gate Road, near the Sayyid Ali Chabutra. It is of considerable dimensions and its enclosure wall from outside measures 51 ft. by 40 ft. The well is not in use now and its approach is from a small doorway which is built in its southern side.

The inscription is carved on a stone table (measuring 4ft. 2 in. by 2 ft. 8 in.), which is fixed over the entrance of the well. The style of writing is Naskh and the inscription consists of four lines of persian verse and the Bismillah which is carved in a separate line at the top.

Translation

- (1) In the name of God, the most merciful and compassionate, (and) whose help we beg.
- (2) By the grace of the Great Creator, Sultan Quli dug a pleasant well.
- (3) He built a mosque for the sake of God ; he (therefore) hopes for the intercession of the Prophet on the day of Judgement.
- (4) May divine displeasure (lit. curse) befall upon that who sells (this building) ! Whoever will purchase it shall become an infidel.
- (5) The divine inspirer suggested the chronogram of the well of the house of God- ‘the stream of the heavy fountain’- 1093 H. (1682 A.D.).

On the road which runs from Khairathabad to Golconda, about half a mile from the former place, is situated the tank of Mai Sahiba. It is about a mile and three Quarters in circumference and although the larger part of it is splitted up now, it would originally have been a picturesque sight, being surrounded on three sides with ranges of garantie rocks, and on the fourth side being surrounded on three sides with ranges of granite rocks and the fourth side being bounded with a massive band about three furlongs in length. At either end of the band stands a large tower rectangular in plan and built of solid masonry.

Translation

The mind, (filled) with high aspirations, of Her Highness, the source of felicity to the family fidelity and chastity, Khanam Angha daughter of Mir Maqsud Ali Tabataba, is always disposed to meet the requirements of the public: accordingly, having taken in view the end of affairs and consequences of pursuits the tank which is situated in the vicinity of the market of Khairatabad has been built by her, in order that living beings of various classes may be convinced thereby and that a continual blessing may rest till the resurrection upon the founder as well as on those who have assisted. Now, in 1034 A.H. the above tank has been awarded by King Muhammad Qutb shah to the refuge of Sayyids and persons of noble birth, Shah Khundar, son of the noble and exalted Shah Muhammad al-Husaini.

In the eastern part of the town of Bodhan is a very small mosque, styled the Alamgiri Masjid, on which two inscriptions are curved, The mosque consists of a single hall which possesses no architectural merits, One of the inscription belongs to the reign of Shajahan and records the construction of a mosque by Aurangzebs, probably at the time when he as a prince was Governor of the Deccan. The chronogram gives the date 1065 H. (1655 A.D) which tallies with the period of Aurangzeb's governorship of the Deccan, shortly before his marching upon Delhi against his imperial father.

The inscription consists of eight lines of Persian verse composed by the poet Mashhadi, whose name occurs in line 7. The style of writing is Nastaliq, but very poor in execution.

Translation

- (1) In obedience to the commandment of the Almighty God, the Lord of both the worlds; and love of..... the exalted Prophet:
- (2) During the reign of Shahjahan the king of the seven climes, the vicegerent of God (lit. Truth), the master of the necks of people:

- (3) the benevolent and generous Prince Aurangzeb, whose existence is a blessing of the Merciful God on people :
- (4) He built a house for worship with (all) the qualities of Heaven : after the site had been previously occupied by the temple of infidels.
- (5) This large building was completed through the efforts of Ilah Yar, the disciple and servant of the lord of the happy conjunction, the king of the world.
- (6) I consulted the Intellect about the chronogram, he (Intellect) sought inscription at the Court of the Divine Teacher.
- (7) The unknown voice of the eloquent Inspirer reached the ears of Mashhadi from the Everlasting Court.
- (8) That, as this auspicious house possesses the virtues of the Holy Region, the chronogram should be determined from the phrase - “ Most blessed house”. 1065 H. (1655 A.D.).

Three inscriptions from the guns of Aurangzeb, which were found at golconda some time ago, have already been published by Mr. G. Yazdani, in the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica for 1913-14 and 1935-36. Subsequently, the archaeological department of Hyderabad, has discovered two more guns of Aurangzeb at Golconda, and I am indebted to Mr. G. Yazdani for kindly allowing me to publish their inscriptions. Ma athir-i-Alamgiri Mentions the name of some guns while describing the siege of Golconda by Aurangzeb, and states that they were used by him in the bombardment of the fort; but it makes no mention of the names of the two guns discovered recently: although they are as important and nearly as large as the guns mentioned in the Ma`athir, the inscription of which were published by Mr. G. Yazdani previously. It is possible that these two guns may have been brought to Golconda some time after its conquest by Aurangzeb, otherwise they would not have remained unnoticed in the Ma'athir.

The gun is made of bronze and dated 1077 H. (1666 A.D.). This gun, which, according to the inscription carved upon it, was called, Qala Kusha (Fort Opener), is mounted on a bastion to the north-west of the Baradari. It is 11 ft in length with a bore 6 in. in diameter. The diameter at the muzzle is 1 ft. 3 in. and the circumference near the butt is 5 ft. 2 in. There are six panels containing inscriptions arranged over the length of the gun. The third and the fifth panels have inscriptions in Arabic, their script being Thulth. The remaining contain inscriptions in Persian and their script is Nasta'liq.

- First panel : Whoever has come to this world will perish someday. One who is ever lasting and perpetual is God.
 Second panel : Abuz-Zafar Muhammad Muhiud-Din Aurangzeb Alamgir Bahadur, the victorious king (Regnal) Year 10.
 Third panel : 1077 H. (1666 A.D.).
 Fourth panel : Qala Kusha (fort opener gun).

At Golconda fort we have some fine specimens of Mughal guns, among which the Fath Raihbar of the Petla Burj, the Azhdha Paikar of the Musa Buruj. and the Dushman of the Sampolia Burj particularly good, on account of their large size, beautiful workmanship and military value. These guns, as a rule, bear on them the name of the manufacturer, the weight of the shorts and gun-powder which are to be used for charging the gun, and the name of the king during whose reign or under whose command they have been made. Artillery was introduced in the Deccan by Turkish engineers in the last decade of the 15th century and we find references to Turkish gunners in the records of that period. Later we find the names of Arab Mechanics also as gunmakers and among them the name of the Muhammad Hussain is prominent as the maker of some magnificent guns.

The present inscription is carved on a gun mounted on the Sampolia Burj at Golconda. The gun is of considerable size, measuring 15ft. 9 in. in length and 2 ft. 4½ in. in girth near the butt and 1 ft. 8 in. near the muzzle. According to the inscription it was made at Asir by one Maratha gunmaker, named Mathra Das son of Ramji. It was apparently brought to Golconda by Aurangzeb, who first used it during the siege of the fort, and after its fall in 1687 A.D. mounted it on the Sampolia Burj in its present position.

The inscription is divided into three parts, each part being carved in a separate panel. The language of the inscription is Persian and the style of writing is Nastaliq.

Among the inscriptions found at Golconda one is carved on a gun which was manufactured at Asir in 1673, but was afterwards removed to Golconda by Aurangzeb when he besieged the latter fort in 1687. The gun bears the name of Aurangzeb as well.

The inscriptions discovered in the city and suburbs of Hyderabad are interesting from an artistic point of view as they represent Thulth and Naskh writings of a high order. Hyderabad until recently was noted for the allied arts of seal engraving and stone calligraphy but as the masters of these arts came from Persia, the decline of these arts was inevitable when such professionals ceased to come to the Deccan.

In addition to the study and critical examination of the above thirty new inscriptions. The authors have also deciphered the texts and prepared the translations of the twenty-five inscriptions of Surat. Broach, Junnar and Ahmadnagar which the Director General of Archaeology in India had sent me to the author at the request of Dr. M. Nazim, an article dealing with these inscriptions is included in the ensuing number of the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica.

During the year under review the publication of Moslem inscriptions has been further pushed by the compilation of a supplementary number to the issue of E. I. M. for 1933-34. In this number Dr. M. Nazim has dealt with seventy-five inscriptions of Western India which, although edited before by other scholars, were included in such publications as were not easily accessible to students and further the texts and translations given by previous editors were not free from mistakes. Dr. Nazim's edition of these inscriptions will prove useful to students for they will be able to study these inscriptions collectively and to trace the history of Moslem Epigraphy in its various aspects.

Translation

The date of the foundation of the bridge.
 "Oh! Lord, direct us in the right way".

In the time of Afzal-ud-Daulah, Bahadur, Nizam-ul-Mulk, the Asaf Jah of the age.

O, God, grant that, so long as the sun and the moon may shine, the sun of his prestige may continue to shine. His worthy minister is the factor of the state (Mukhtar-ul-mulk, better known as Salar Jung), who in all circumstances desires the good. Colonel Davidson was the good-hearted ambassador, possessed of honour and dignity. This bridge, which resembles the arch of the seventh hall of heaven, was built after the design of Mr Mart; the straightway over the river Musi; and from this district one may ascertain the date of its completion.

The chronogram gives the date A.H. 1270 (=A.D. 1853-54).

This inscription, in Sanskrit verse and Telugu prose, is on a broken piece of stone set up near the dhvaja-stambha of the Mailaru temple in Ainavolu, which is a village about 8 miles away from Warangal on the road to Khammamet, a couple of miles off the main road.

It records the grant of the village of Ayyanavolu to Mailaradevara by Anapotanaya of the Recarla dynasty in Saka 1291, Saumya, Sravana, su. 15. Thursday. The gift was made on the occasion of the digvijaya by Anapota.

This inscription also gives a number of details about this dynasty. There are many royal dynasties: and the Recerla gotra amidst them has been honoured by the Kakatiyas. In this dynasty was born Vennayya-naya and his son Dacaya. Dacaya proceeded to conquer the Pandyas in accordance with the orders of Prataparudra and obtained the title Pandya-roya-gaja-kesari. He had a son named Singanna who won many titles by his great deeds. His son Anapota-naya ruled along with his brother Madhava-naya. Anapota was ruling Orugallu, Tribhuvana-giri, Raju-konda, Singavaramu and the rest of the Telugu country when he made the grant to the deity Mailara-deva. The inscription adds that this deity is no other than Mallara and that the goddess by his side, Madaci, is Parvati only.

The author of this inscription is Naganatha, son of Pasupati, of the Kaushika gotra.

Place : Inscription in the Ghassalwari, Hyderabad City.
 Dynasty :
 Reign of :
 Inscription date : A.D. 1619.
 Language : Persian.

Ghassalwari, as its meaning indicates, was once the quarter of the professional washers of the bodies of the dead. The quarter is close to the Mir-ka-Dair, an important necropolis of Hyderabad City. In this quarter is a small mosque bearing an inscription of Bibi Khadija, daughter of Mir 'Ali Astarabadi, whose tomb is situated in the Mir-ka-Daira. Near the mosque is a platform on which there are several tombs bearing inscriptions.

The inscription is carved on a tablet fixed at the head of a tomb on the platform. The inscription contains the Tughra.

Translation

(1)“The refuge of Sayyids, (who is) residing in paradise, Amir Sayyid, son of the refuge of Sayyids, Mir 'Inayatullah of Mashhad (by birth) and of Isfahan by residence : on the 20th of Rajab, in the year 1028 H”. (Wednesday, 25th June, 1619 A.D.).

The tablet, on which the above inscription is carved, has the phrase and the Shiite durud on its back.

The next inscription of this locality, in chronological order, is carved over the mihrab of the mosque referred to above. It consists of two lines of Persian prose written in the Tughra style.

Translation

“This mosque was built for the bestowal of divine favour on the chaste, pious, austere, devout and religious (lady), Bibi Khadijia, daughter of Mir Sayyid Ali of Astarabad, the Shaikh of Awand, in the year 1034 H. (1624 A.D.).

Bibi Khadija, according to the inscription carved on her tomb, died in 1031 H. This Mosque was built three years after her death.

Another inscription at this site is on a tablet fixed at the head of the tomb on the platform in the vicinity of the mosque. The inscription consists of five Persian couplets written in the Nastaliq characters. The couplets lament the death of one Ainulla and contain a chronogram giving the hijra year 1036 H. (1627 A.D.). The inscriptional tablet does not seem to be in its original place for the tomb at the head of which it is fixed, bears on its sarcophagus an epitaph giving the date 7th Jumada I 1222 H. The figures given this year are written in two lines, 12 at the top and 22 below them. If these figures respect the hijra year head-tablet belonging to another tomb is correct. But if 12 and 22 represent separately something else the head-tablet giving the year 1036 H. may belong to this tomb and the year may be taken as the date of the death of the person buried therein.

Translation

- (1) "When Ainulla departed from this world, the atmosphere grew thick (lit. dark) by the cries which were raised.
- (2) "Whoever heard of his death showed grief and said, 'May mercy be upon his forebears !'
- (3) "He did not hurt even an ant although it passed from under his foot.
- (4) "Wisdom inquired about the year of his death: thou (perchance) do not know the people which have been given him by god.
- (5) "Take away the last letter of the word and say (the phrase)- may the highest heaven be his resting place ! - is the chronogram.

1036 H. (1627 A.D.).

About two furlongs to the west of the Ohadarghat Darwaza of the Hyderabad city is a cemetery containing many old graves. In this cemetery two beautifully carved inscripational slabs are lying, which apparently at one time were attached to some tombs. One of them contains the Shitte durud, written in beautiful Thulth characters. At the end of the durud, the dare 1056 H., which probably refers to the demise of the person who was buried in the tomb.

The other tablet also has the Shiite durud carved on it, but in the upper part of it, around the durud are inscribed four Persian couplets, the script being Nasta'liq. The letters of the upper part of the tablet have decayed and it is difficult to make out the couplets in full. The durid is written in the Thulth style and below it are inscribed the name of the described, Ali Riza Khan and the date 1067 H. (1656 A.D.)

Translation

This mosque is situated near the Kotla `Ali Jah and has several inscriptions in its prayer hall. They consist of Quotations from the Quran religious text.

In the courtyard of this mosque there is a grave which has a sarcophagus of black stone. At the head of the grave an inscriptional tablet is fixed which contains two Arabic couplets and some religious texts. The grave is reported to be that of Salih Begam; but the inscriptional tablet does not bear her name nor does it bear the date of the death.

Over the doorway of this mosque a large inscription is carved which records the bequest of some houses and shops for the maintenance of the mosque, and also contains an imprecation against ill-users of the gift. Such imprecations are frequently found in contemporary land-grants, compiled in the languages of the Deccan and South India and are rare in North India. The language of the inscription is Persian and the script Naskh. In the beginning there are three couplets of a rambling character and after them comes the imprecation. The purpose of the bequest is further described and then follows another impression.

Translation

- (1) "I have bequeathed all the houses and the shops for the mosque: in the names of the chosen Prophet (Muhammad) and his son-in-law Ali and (in the name of) their noble progeny and descendents".
- (2) "I have made this request with the hope that on the day of judgement my desire will be fulfilled, and the select (things) of both worlds, as well as the cup-bearer and the wine be in my possession".
- (3) "My friends and relatives have no share in this property, and whoever claims it his claim is unlawful".

“If she is a woman who lays claim to these houses and shops, which have been bequeathed for the mosque, she (as it were) commits adultery with her father in the sacred precincts of Mecca, and if he is a man, he (as it were) commits adultery with his mother in the same precincts. In the year 1067 H. (1657 A.D.)”.

“Salih Begam Sayyida has written on this effect that whoever will stay in the bequeathed houses and shops he shall pay the rent, which is to be spent on the carpets and lamps of the mosque and (also) on the pay of the muadhdhin (the public-crier) and the steward. And if any amount is left over (after the expenditure specified above) that will be on the annual feasting and (special) prayers. Whoever will stay in the house or the shop, and will not pay the rent, shall be overtaken by the curse of the God, and his head shall become the head of a pig : and he shall be in the infernal fire of hell”.

Narsapur is now head-quarters of a Taluqa in the late Nawab Khurshid Jah's Paigah in H. E. H. Nizam's Dominions, and it is situated 32 miles north of Hyderabad. A manuscript containing a statistical account of the Deccan in the early part of the 18th century, describes Narsapur as a Pargana in Medak Sarkar yielding a revenue of Rs. 79,178.

The inscription is carved in three lines on a tablet of pinkish sandstone measuring 4'6" X 1'6". The language is Persian and the style of writing is Nastaliq. The inscription is in verse.

Translation

This town had no sweet spring,
The limpid waters of which could moisten the lips of the thirsty.
Khafi Khan constructed this fine well,
The waves of the waters of which are life to the (human) body.
Hatifi composed the chronogram thus:-

“ It is a purer spring than the Kauthar”.

1140 A.H. (1727-28 A.D.).

Translation

The Prophet of God, the Apostle of distinction
 The expected one among the (divine) title-holders, the brother of Apostles;
 The guide in land and sea, His Holiness Khwaja Khizr.
 The lord of the eternal kingdom, the traveller of the path of righteousness,
 Proficient in divine knowledge, initiated into the divine secret.
 My prayer is that, science his person bestows on to high and low (alike), may his blessings be continuous to me and to my descendants.

..... without cant or insincerity.

Muhammad Ismail Khan Bahadur, Ismail yar jang.
